'Buck Stops At The Top' Not True In Air Force Or Sausalito

"The buck stops here."

When Harry Truman said it, he meant it stopped with the presidency. At the top.

It doesn't always work that way.

In some cases — like the Air Force and like Hamilton Air Force Base, for instance — it stops near the bottom.

And in other cases, like in the Sausalito School District, if it stops in the wrong place, people don't like it.

I REFER to the cases of Maj. Donald H. Tidwell and Sidney F. Walton Jr.

Tidwell is the career Air Force officer who was chief of security at Halmiton until it was revealed he had allowed psychiatrically unstable airmen to guard the base's secret nuclear weapons as well as carry loaded weapons while dealing with the public.

The fact that he ignored psychiatric evaluations — saying other factors outweighed them — undermined the whole theory of the Air Force's "human reliability program," a failsafe type of program designed to insure that only stable and trustworthy men are entrusted with the nation's security.

The upshot of the whole messy affair has been that Tidwell has been relieved of duty and the airmen probably will be quietly discharged. Tidwell, a 17-year veteran, probably will be transferred and, Air Force people say, probably will never have another major command or promotion.

And that will be that, as far as the Air Force is concerned. The buck will have stopped at the bottom.

BUT SHOULD IT? The answer in the view of many career Air Force men at Hamilton, of course, is "absolutely not." Many officers in the "middle management" level at Hamilton feel the buck should go right up to the men responsible for evaluating Tidwell's performance, judgment and ability to handle the extremely sensitive job in which he was put.

Those men are Col. Donald H. Lynch, wing commander of the 78th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron, and Col. Michael J. Stublarec, the base commander who retires shortly.

Some also feel that the buck should go even higher, to their commanders and those Air Force brasshats at the Pentagon who designed the "human reliability program" which, we have learned very chillingly, is not completely failsafe.

IN SAUSALITO, the "buck" I'm talking about is the education of black kids, which most of us agree has been sadly, if not criminally, neglected — in Sausalito and throughout the United States.

That buck has been ignored by conservatives and passed rapidly around by so-called liberals like it was a hot coal (as in "The Fire Next Time").

So, in Sausalito, a progressive school board and a progressive school administration decided to pass the buck to someone who was willing to hold it. A black man. A black "revolutionary." A black militant. A Sid Walton.

And listen to the howls! The uproar serves to reinforce a point Walton makes over and over and over in his book on "The Black Curriculum": white America is not ready to accept black-directed change.

But is anyone else prepared to let the buck — the education of black children — stop with him?

If he is, why is the buck still being passed?

Outlawing Pedestrian Span Toll Is Sought

Elimination of the 10-cent toll for pedestrians on the Golden Gate Bridge was proposed yesterday by Marin County Supervisor Michael Wornum.

The annual revenue of about $3,500 from the dime tolls "is small potatoes compared with the public relations benefit" of dropping it entirely, Wornum told the legislation-public relations committee of the bridge and highway district.

Terming the toll "a silly thing," he said it only serves to irritate persons who come to enjoy the bridge. He noted that no toll is collected from pedestrians coming from the Marin side, adding "we're just thinking of the San Franciscans."

Committee chairman Lowell Edington of Napa County objected mildly that "there are legal opinions on free passage across the Golden Gate," but agreed to have Wornum's proposal referred to the finance committee.

The Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District's legislation-public relations committee also:

REPRINT — Asked the Redwood Empire Association to act as the district's agent in arranging the reprint and sale of a 1938 book about the building of the bridge. The committee is considering spending up to $26,000 to have the books reprinted for use as "public relations" mementos for public officials and important visitors to the bridge.

REUNION — Asked Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring to turn over to the Redwood Empire Association, San Francisco Visitors and Convention Bureau and the labor unions representing district employees a proposal that a reunion be held for the men who built the bridge.

NEWSLETTER — Shelved a proposal by Leslie I. Hood Jr. of Mill Valley that the district hire him as a public relations consultant at $15 an hour, pending negotiations with the Redwood Empire Association to provide a district newsletter as part of the work it does under the district's annual $25,000 contribution to the association.

LAKE — Again postponed action on a 10-month-old bid by Lake County to annex to the bridge district.

Panther Gets Shootout Term

OAKLAND (AP) — A Black Panther member charged along with Eldridge Cleaver in a shootout with Oakland police April 6, 1968, was sentenced yesterday to one to 15 years in prison.

Charles Bursey, 23, was convicted by a jury three weeks ago of two counts of attempted murder and two counts of assault on a peace officer.

Panther Bobby Hutton was killed in the battle, and Cleaver and patrolmen Nolan Darnell and Richard Jensen were wounded.

Redwood Grove Held In Logging Operation Danger

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The conservationist Sierra Club has sent a telegram to President Richard M. Nixon warning him that the redwood grove he dedicated Wednesday to Lady Bird Johnson is in danger of destruction by logging operations.

"Had you and your party taken 188 steps more beyond the dedication site," club President Phillip Berry wrote yesterday, "you would have witnessed the current logging of Skunk Cabbage Creek, an area thought worthy of inclusion by the sponsor of the senate bill which created the park..."

Berry called for expansion of the park "as quickly as possible" from its present 58,000 acres to the 90,000 park originally proposed by the Sierra Club.

He told a news conference that the Georgia Pacific and Arcata Redwood companies are cutting as quickly as possible into the remaining forests adjacent to the park to prevent its enlargement.

Consultants To Be Hired For Better Span Insurance

Hiring of insurance consultants to help get more coverage on the Golden Gate Bridge was approved yesterday by the bridge and highway district's joint rules and policy and insurance committee.

The district has been trying without success to boost its present $46 million structural insurance to $57 million, but the earthquake hazard posed by the adjacent San Andreas Fault has discouraged insurance companies from upping the coverage.

The structure cost $35 million to complete in 1937, but would cost at least $200 million to replace today, district officials have estimated.

After hearing a parade of insurance consultants and brokers assure them that more coverage was almost certain — if they were hired by the district — the committee asked Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring to review their proposals and to recommend which consulting firm should be selected, and the cost and extent of the service.

Compounding the district's insurance problems is the fact that it would collect the present $46 million structural coverage only if the structure were totally destroyed, which is considered a remote possibility even in the most severe earthquake. If less than totally destroyed, the coverage is only for 40 per cent of the damage, thus the district would collect only $4 million for each $10 million damage.

Drugs In Mexico

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—Mexican pharmacies will no longer sell barbituates, sleeping pills, pep pills and similar drugs without a doctor's prescription, on order of the Federal Health Department. Sale of such drugs without a prescription had been legal in Mexico for years.

Alioto Has No Senate Interest

SAN DIEGO (AP)—San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto said yesterday he won't seek a U.S. Senate seat but still plans to run for governor.

Alioto, a Democrat, ended speculation that he would drop his gubernatorial effort and seek the Senate seat held by Republican George Murphy.

"I have no interest in the Senate," Alioto told a newsman while in San Diego for political meetings and a Rotary Club speech.

"It's a great office, but some of us are not mentally geared for the legislative process. I've excluded that option, ruled it out."

Paper Links Senators To Jury Bribery Probe

Louisiana's Long Denies Any Wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) — Allegations that two senators took bribes to influence a government contract are being investigated by a federal grand jury in Baltimore, the Washington Post reported today.

In a copyrighted story, the newspaper said the jury is investigating Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., and former Democratic Sen. Daniel B. Brewster of Maryland. Brewster was defeated for reelection last year.

Long refuted the allegations, telling the paper by telephone from Baton Rouge, La., last night that "someone stole a lot of campaign money and was trying to escape the penitentiary by trying to put Brewster in his place," the Post reported.

Today, Long said, "I have done nothing wrong . . . some person is trying to defend himself" in the handling of the funds. He suggested that it was a former employee of Brewster.

U.S. Atty. Stephen H. Sachs of Maryland described as directing the probe, told the Post he has "no specific comment at all, other than to say that a special grand jury in Baltimore has been inquiring into possible violations of federal bribery laws since early this year."

IN IRELAND

The Post said Brewster is in Ireland and could not be reached for comment.

The newspaper reported the case on which the grand jury is focusing much of its attention involves allegations that Brewster and Long shared a bribe for exerting pressure to get extra costs approved for extensive underground parking facilities recently built for the House in connection with construction of the $100-million-plus Rayburn House office building.

It added that this allegation is that the two were paid to pressure the office of the Capitol architect to approve "extras" for the garages.

The prime contractor for the construction is Baltimore Contractors, Inc., the paper said, adding that its president—Victor J. Frenkil—is a contributor to Brewster and the Democratic Party and is a friend of Long.

TOTAL PRICE

The total price for the underground garages was to be $13.5 million and it was to have been completed by April 1966, the Post said. It added that Frenkil's contract was for $11.7 million.

The Post said that, according to testimony by officials in the Capitol architect's office, the government was not able to use the garage until September 1967.

It added that during construction, Baltimore Contractors and the Capitol architect's office

Syria To Free All Aboard Jet

DAMASCUS, Syria (UPI)—Syrian officials, pressed by stubborn schoolteacher from Los Angeles who refused to leave her Israeli companions, said today they will release all 113 persons aboard a hijacked Trans World Airlines jet.

"All of you, including the Israelis, will leave within the hour," a Syrian official told the 101 passengers and 12 crew members who were aboard the TWA Boeing 707 when it was hijacked yesterday during a flight from Rome to Athens.

Earlier, Syrian officials said six Israelis—four men and two women—were being detained.

LEADS GROUP

Finne Perry, a chemistry and physics teacher in Los Angeles, led a band of American passengers who had told the Syrians they refused to be separated from four Israeli women who had been on the plane. Miss Perry said she would go with the Israeli women "wherever that may be."

The four Israeli women had been separated from the rest of the passengers for sometime by Syrian officials but then were allowed to rejoin the others.

In the presence of the other passengers, the Americans were assured all the Israeli passengers would be flown out today with them on an a chartered DC8 jet of the Italian airline Alitalia sent from Rome to pick them up.

QUESTION ACTION

"The women?" asked Miss Perry.

"They go," said the Syrians.

"The men?" asked Miss Perry.

"They go," the Syrians said.

One of the Israeli women told UPI after she was allowed to rejoin the other passengers, "I was not really afraid during the hijacking but felt very tense."

Newsmen at the scene said four Israeli women and two Israeli men were among the passengers although earlier passengers from Damascus said four Israeli men and two Israeli women had been aboard the hijacked airliner.

TWA assigned a team of mechanics on the Alitalia jet to assess the damage to the hijacked Boeing 707, whose cockpit and nose assembly were blown up after landing. Syrian officials said there were no injuries.

Two Arab commandos forced the TWA jet to fly to Damascus while it was heading from Rome to Athens. The hijackers, a woman identified as Shadia Abou Ghazala, a Yemini, and a man identified only as an Algerian, were hustled from the airport by police and kept in custody.

The hijacking, first seizure of a U.S. airliner outside the western hemisphere, drew condemnation from Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Israeli government officials. The number of Americans aboard was unknown.

The Popular Front for Liberation of Palestine (PFLP), an Arab guerrilla group based in Cairo, said its

Demo Governors Silent On Kennedy

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Democratic governors generally count Edward M. Kennedy out of contention for the 1972 presidential nomination —but they aren't ready to take sides or forecast a successor to the Massachusetts senator as the party's front-runner for a challenge to President Richard M. Nixon.

Republican governors, who outnumber the Democrats 30 to 20, are predictably unanimous in their praise of Nixon's White House performance so far.

Those views were expressed in an Associated Press survey of opinion among the state executives, who began assembling here today for the 61st National Governors Conference.

While most Democrats prepared to discuss the matter accept Kennedy's disclaimer of 1972 presidential candidacy, they are cautious about forecasting the prospects for a race three years away.

"I have absolutely no way of knowing," said Gov. Buford Ellington of Tennessee, the conference chairman.

"Anything can happen between now and 1972," said Gov. John Burns of Hawaii.

But one thing most Democrats do not expect is a revival of the candidacy Kennedy rejected after the July 18 automobile accident in which a young girl secretary died.

Democratic governors who are guessing now anticipate a presidential lineup including

Sausalito Arts Festival Is Under Way

Several hundred persons were on hand today as the Sausalito Arts Festival opened its annual three-day run at the new Art Center on the grounds of the old Bayside School in Sausalito.

The festival's attractions this year include art in all its traditional and contemporary forms from painting to films as well as jazz and rock music.

Works by 120 artists and craftsmen will be on display through Monday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

A "glue-in" for children is another "happening," where youngsters can build their own sculptures of wood and glue. There will also be a tunnel for them to walk through, to contemplate in and smell herbs, following the theme of this year's festival, "Earth."

Even a style show by a Marin City group has been scheduled along with light shows and an exhibit showing what man has done to some portions of the earth.

Allied Troops Join Forces In Attempt To Trap Enemy

SAIGON (AP) — Reinforced U.S. and South Vietnamese troops surrounded a valley south of Da Nang today hoping to trap part of a North Vietnamese division that has been slugging it out with allied forces for two weeks.

The allies expected to find elements of two regiments of the North Vietnamese 2nd Division in the Que Son Valley some 30 miles south of Da Nang, but contact was so light it was believed most enemy troops may have escaped. (See picture, page 2.)

The allied forces, swelled to 3,000 with the reinforcement of a U.S. Marine battalion and a South Vietnamese battalion, launched a sweep from four sides along the jungled ridges around the valley near the refugee center of Hiep Duc.

At first, the major target was a 1,270-foot peak called Deo Ram, in the adjoining Hiep Duc Valley just to the south of Que Son Valley. But U.S. Marines found only light opposition on the hill, which had been stoutly defended the day before.

So the hunt was pressed in the Que Son Valley area, hoping that the North Vietnamese would be found among the rice paddies in the valley and along the slopes of the surrounding hills.

As of Saturday, U.S. Army and Marines had claimed about 1,000 enemy killed since Aug. 12, when infantrymen made the first contact in what developed into one of the biggest battles of the year.

U.S. losses since major fighting began Aug. 17 are estimated at 75 killed and 328 wounded. Ranking officers said U.S. Marines have lost 38 killed and 180 wounded since they joined the battle Aug. 23.

At first, U.S. officers thought the North Vietnamese were preparing to attack Hiep Duc. Now they believe the enemy aim either was to inflict casualties or to lure defenders away from pacified areas south of Da Nang.

All the fighting has centered around Hiep Duc, a showcase government resettlement center where 3,000 refugees from the war in the interior now live.

U.S. officers said one of the North Vietnamese division's regiments, the 3rd, has suffered nearly 80 per cent casualties. The division's 2nd Regiment is in better condition, but now it appears in disarray and trying to get away, they added. The 2nd Regiment was the main target of the allied trap. It is called a Viet Cong regiment but 95 per cent of it is believed to be made up of North Vietnamese.

From various intelligence reports, including information from defectors and prisoners, Marine officers said they learned of the whereabouts of the regiment.

The two battalion of Marines and South Vietnamese troops were airlifted into the hills overlooking the Que Son Valley Saturday after a reinforced Marine reconnaissance team secured the previously abandoned mountaintop fire support base, Ryder at about dusk Friday.

Two other battalions of the

Nixon Joins Nation In Weekend Holiday

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — President Richard Nixon, like millions of other Americans, enjoyed a relaxing Labor Day weekend golfing and swimming at his western retreat by the sea.

The President, however, will cut short the three-day holiday Monday when he flies to Colorado Springs to tour the North American Defense (NORAD) headquarters and address the National Governors Conference. (See story, also page 1.)

Nixon lost two of his favorite golfing partners yesterday but it did not keep the chief executive off the putting green at his estate here. The President also had time for a three-hour swim at a private beach at nearby Camp Pendleton Marine base.

Nixon lost his golfing companions when his daughter and son-in-law, Julie and David Eisenhower, flew to Chicago to attend the private wedding of a friend.

Nixon and his best friend Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo practiced putting, then once again passed up the President's front yard beach for the one at Camp Pendleton. Nixon prefers the Pendleton beach to his own because of moderate surf conditions.

The President spent the morning hours of yesterday with his staff preparing for next week's official schedule, which includes a cabinet meeting and studying the tax reform bill.

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler reported the President and his fiscal and economic advisers have been taking a close look at the tax reform bill passed by the House. The House bill gives greater tax cuts to the middle income group than the Nixon administration wants.

The Nixons continue to get good reports that their daughter Tricia, 23, recuperating from abdominal pains, is "feeling better and soon will be in perfect shape." She was released from Walter Reed Army Hospital Thursday after a two-day stay.

Five-Point Plan Offered North Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British Home Secretary James Callaghan presented five proposals to end strife between Roman Catholics and Protestants in Northern Ireland and then left today for London.

He promised to return in a few weeks to confer with British officials who will arrive in a few days and help Northern Ireland's government work out reforms in housing, jobs and election practices.

Callaghan dismissed demands of the Catholic-based Civil Rights Association calling for abolition of the provincial parliament and urged its early recall to speed work on reforms.

Unless his proposals are accepted, he warned, Northern Ireland could face chaos and an-

Pittsburgh Is Calm; Conference On Jobs

PITTSBURGH (AP) — After five straight days of angry and occasionally violent protests by blacks and whites over construction jobs for Negroes, this industrial center moved quietly into the Labor Day weekend today.

Black demonstrators appeared willing, for the moment, to allow their demands for more jobs in the construction industry to be resolved at the conference table.

About 13,000 construction workers, angry over the loss of $1.3 million in pay caused by the shutdown of 10 major construction jobs, planned only rest over the weekend.

The projects worth $200 million were closed to meet black demands made in three days of protest by the Black Construction Coalition, a loosely knit group of black organizations in the city.

The protests were countered with the demonstrations Thursday and yesterday by the idled workers. Some 3,000 marched through the streets yesterday, chanting, "We want to work!"

Some carried signs reading "God bless Pittsburgh police," on their way to City Hall. About 50 made a headlong rush into the offices of Mayor Joseph M. Barr, where leaders of the coalition, the craft unions, construction site owners and contractors had met earlier without an agreement being reached.

The workers did not reach the mayor despite their cries of "We want Barr now. We want Barr now." One black television

At Least 20 Called In Kennedy Case

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (UPI) —At least 20 persons have been subpoenaed to testify at the inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne.

District Court Clerk Thomas Teller said nine of the persons had accepted the subpoenas by late yesterday afternoon. The other 11, who live further away, are expected to receive their summonses today. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy was among the 20.

The inquest is scheduled to begin Wednesday but could be delayed if attorneys for the witnesses decide to appeal District Judge James A. Boyle's ruling denying them (the witnesses) the rights given defendants in criminal trials.

The lawyers met yesterday to discuss the appeals question but they made no public comment afterward.

Miss Kopechne was killed around midnight July 18 when a car driven by Kennedy went off a narrow bridge into a tidal pond on Chappaquiddick Island.

Included among the 20 witnesses summoned for the inquest were all those, including Kennedy, who attended the cookout reunion on Chappaquid-

Paper Can Not Publish Names Of Drug Agents

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge has ordered the Los Angeles Free Press not to list the names, addresses and telephone numbers of state narcotics agents.

Superior Court Judge Richard Schauer issued the preliminary injunction yesterday, naming Arthur Kunkin, the publisher of the antiestablishment weekly, in the order.

Under the heading "Know Your Neighborhood Narc," the Free Press recently published a list of 80 undercover investigators. The agents contend they were subjected to harassment as a result.

The injunction was sought by senior agent Harold Feldman. In a second suit brought by the state attorney general's office, 23-year-old Jerry M. Reznick, identified as a former mail clerk in the attorney general's office, was enjoined from further dissemination of confidential information.

I-J SALUTES THE RETURN TO SCHOOL

With the new 1969-70 term scheduled to begin in many Marin County schools next week, today's issue of the Independent-Journal's Marin Magazine is devoted largely to feature stories dealing with the schools.

Included is a special feature about the bus systems charged with responsibility for transporting thousands of the county's school children.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Byrnes In Hospital Once Again

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP)—James F. Byrnes, former U.S. secretary of state and Supreme Court justice, was admitted to a hospital last night after suffering what his physican said was a heart attack.

The 90-year-old Byrnes, who became governor of South Carolina after his national service, was twice hospitalized earlier this year for undisclosed illnesses.

Dr. Izard Josey, his personal physician, said Byrnes showed some improvement an hour after he was admitted to Baptist Hospital.

Dr. Josey said, "The indications are that it was a heart attack." Byrnes became ill at his home in Columbia.

Once called the "assistant president" by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Byrnes served as director of War Mobilization during World War II.

He signed the United Nations Charter for the United States and served in both houses of Congress — 11 years in the Senate and 14 in the House. He served as a U.S. Supreme Court justice before joining the Roosevelt administration.

Out Of Hospital

Mrs. Kennedy, 33, was accompanied by her husband, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, according to hospital officials, who reported her in excellent condition.

Sirhan Bill

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The county has paid a psychiatrist $10,811 for his services in the trial of Sirhan Bishara Sirhan convicted of murdering Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn had said the fee for Dr. Seymour Pollack was excessive and asked a review of the bill.

Dist. Atty. Evelle Younger said the bill was modest, not covering all the time Pollack spent on the case at the agreed rate of $40 an hour.

Storm Threat

MIAMI (AP) — A tropical disturbance kicked up 40 mile-per-hour squalls in the central Caribbean today and a Navy hurricane hunter pilot winged out for a look at the latest tropical storm threat.

A broad, disorganized circulation center was located earlier by an Air Force pilot near latitude 13.5 north, longitude 71.5 west, about 250 miles south of the Dominican Republic.

Token Proposal

BANGKOK (AP) — U.S. officials say they will propose only a token withdrawal of some Army construction and supply units from Thailand in talks that are scheduled to start next week.

The officials said yesterday that the move will not affect the more than 36,000 Air Force personnel involved in the Vietnam war or the 1,000-man U.S. Advisory Group, which trains Thai forces. There are 50,000 U.S. troops stationed here.

To Protest

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will protest officially the Soviet Union's delay in informing Japan about a collision between a fishing boat and a Soviet patrol boat in which 11 Japanese were killed, the Foreign Ministry said today.

The collision occurred Aug. 9 off Soviet-controlled Shikotsu Island, northeast of Hokkaido, the most northerly of Japan's principal islands.

Prehistoric Find

SANTANDER, Spain (AP) — The body of a paleolithic man estimated to have lived 30,000 years before Christ has been found in a Spanish cave, Dr. Leslie G. Freeman of the University of Chicago announced today.

He said the body was so well preserved that it will give scientists a first glimpse of what cave men really looked like.

The find climaxed three years of digging in Morin Cave, 12 miles from this provincial capital.

To Dedicate Park

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) — President Richard M. Nixon's daughter Julie and her husband, David Eisenhower, will take part in dedication ceremonies next Saturday at the $1.1 million new Fairchild Camera and Instrument Corp. plant in Shiprock, N.M.

The Western White House, announcing the trip Sunday, said the plant is the nation's largest single employer of American Indians, with 1,200 Navajos and Indians of other tribes on its payroll.

'Doing Fine'

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Mrs. Janice Curtain, 30, and her quadruplet boys, born yesterday, are doing fine but the father, Robert, "almost came completely unglued."

"When she told me she was going to have four," Curtain said, "I didn't believe it and that was two months ago.

"But she did and I've been walking around in a daze," said the happy father.

The babies, ranging from two pounds 10 ounces to four pounds eight and one-half ounces, were delivered by Caesarian section by a surgical team of eight headed by Dr. Charles W. Plow of Santa Ana.

PROVING A POINT

Joyce Nary, secretary for Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, needs a magnifying glass to read the fine print in the new state office telephone directory. Bagley recently criticized the use of a small type size in the new directory, which cut 40 pages out of the book. The San Rafael legislator said his staff will continue to use the old directories with readable type and that "a dozen or so of the new directories have already been consigned to the wastebasket." U.N. Post 'Thrills' Shirley Temple Black

SAN CLEMENTE (AP)—Shirley Temple Black, became a millionaire at 12 and appeared in three dozen movies that made her famous to a generation of moviegoers. But she says President Richard M. Nixon has given her "the thrill of my life."

The President named the former child star yesterday as one of five representatives and five alternates making up the U.S. delegation to the September session of the United Nations General Assembly.

Mrs. Black, now 41, was fishing in Hawaiian waters when she learned the news via ship-to-shore telephone.

"I haven't heard the report," she told a newsman. "But I'll take your word for it. It's the thrill of my life. Thank you."

Also named as delegates for the 24th annual session were Ambassador Charles W. Yost, the permanent U.S. representative to the United Nations; William B. Buffum, deputy permanent representative, and two congressmen—Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., and J. Irvine Whalley, R-Pa.

Selected as alternate representatives were Christopher H. Phillips, deputy representative of the United States on the U.N. Security Council; Joseph E. Johnson of Princeton, N.J., president and trustee of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, New York City; Rita E. Hauser, New York City, U.S. representative on the Human Rights Commission of UNESCO; Glenn A. Olds, U.S. representative in the Economic and Social Council of UNESCO, and William T. Coleman Jr., a Philadelphia, Pa., attorney.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE BLACK
To U.N. post

Mrs. Black charmed moviegoers of the 1930s and 1940s as the deeply dimpled, curly haired star of such films as "Little Miss Marker," "Curly Top," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Dimples," "The Little Colonel" and "The Littlest Rebel."

Two years ago she lost to fellow Republican Paul McCloskey in a GOP congressional primary.

She is married to Charles Black the son of the late head of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., one of California's largest firms.

No Pueblo Hoped In Copter Case

WASHINGTON (UPI) —State Department officials say they hope the United States can secure the release of three U.S. helicopter crewmen from North Korea without the tortuous negotiations that took place before the Pueblo crew were freed.

The expectation here was that the United States would draft a document acknowledging the facts of the case and expressing its regret. It was hoped that such a document would win the release of the three crew members, who are reported to be injured, faster than in the case of a 1963 helicopter incident when two crewmen were held one year.

Administration officials believe hard bargaining could be in store before U.S. and North Korean negotiators can agree on the release of the crew of the helicopter, shot down over North Korea Aug. 17.

But the officials noted important differences between the case of the spy ship USS Pueblo and the unarmed Army OH23 helicopter.

A 10 PER CENT HIKE

TWA Leads Airlines Asking Increase In Domestic Fares

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trans World Airlines has called for a 10 per cent increase in domestic fares, the most daring rate hike proposal before the Civil Aeronautics Board.

Some 15 other airlines have requested fare increases.

The CAB will lift the lid on the simmering kettle of airline problems next Thursday when it hears oral argument from the airlines and from opponents of any general fare increase.

In the latter category are 20 western members of Congress, headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Third District, who have asked the board to suspend and investigate the fare increase proposals.

In a 14-page defense of its proposal Eastern Airlines said the industry's financial position is deteriorating rapidly. Eastern said the airlines cannot hope to hold the line on fares when all prices and wages it must pay have risen steadily.

Chairman John H. Crooker Jr. has indicated the CAB will act swiftly, so that if an increase is permitted it may go into effect by Oct. 1.

Crooker has classified the major fare proposals in three groups. The prototype tariff filings are those of:

1. Continental—a flat increase on all tickets for flights of more than 400 miles. It would range from $2 additional, for trips of 400 to 499 miles, to a maximum increase of $9 on flights of more than 1,900 miles.

2. United—a fixed terminal charge of $11 for each ticket, plus a flat line-haul charge of 5.7 cents a mile.

3. Eastern—an $8.60 terminal charge with a variable line-haul charge ranging downward in four mileage blocks, from 6.7 cents a mile for trips up to 400 miles, down to five cents a mile for flights of more than 1,800 miles.

Continental's plan would raise fares an estimated 6 per cent, United's 6.6 per cent, and Eastern's about 8 per cent.

In a statement filed late last week TWA said that in view of the industry's serious need none of the proposals was adequate, and a 10 per cent increase would be justified. TWA said it would support Eastern's 8 per cent hike as "minimal."

Continental said it would oppose any increase based on a formula, and said the CAB has no authority to impose upon it the fare structures proposed by United, Eastern or American without first suspending them and conducting an investigation as to their legality.

Integration Ordered In Two Cities

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court Justice William J. Brennan has cleared the way for implementation of school desegregation plans in Denver and Oklahoma City and Justice Hugo L. Black has been asked to reinstate a desegregation plan for 33 Mississippi school districts.

Negro attorneys for the Legal Defense Fund (LDF) of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People yesterday urged Black to reinstate a plan ordered by the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in an effort to prod the 33 Mississippi districts into meaningful desegregation when classes open next week.

Black, who administers the Fifth Circuit, was expected to take the matter up today, but it was not known when he would act.

BOOTS ORDERS

Brennan, in vacating two lower court orders yesterday acted to promote school desegregation in Denver and Oklahoma City.

Brennan's order in the Denver case has the effect of partially implementing a school desegregation plan prepared by the school board in 1968 but later rescinded when the membership of the board changed. The plan included busing about 4,000 pupils out of their home districts.

U.S. District Judge William Doyle barred the board from blocking the original plan, but the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals stayed Doyle's order pending further hearings. Brennan's action reinstated Doyle's order.

The Oklahoma City desegregation plan was approved earlier this month by U.S. District Judge Luther Bohanon. But a federal appeals court blocked it when white families complained that it would disrupt the neighborhood school system and require busing.

TUESDAY DEADLINE

Brennan received the plan and said opponents could file papers by Tuesday which will be considered further "by a justice of this court."

In the Mississippi case, the Supreme Court granted a delay Thursday until Dec. 1, as requested by the Justice Department. The department said more time was needed before the new plans can be put into effect in Mississippi.

The schools have been operating under freedom-of-choice plans, but in an important 1968 opinion the Supreme Court frowned on such plans if they do not bring about desegregated schools.

Santa Rosan Freed

PRAGUE (UPI) — Czechoslovakia has released an American youth detained for nine days since street fighting erupted in Prague last week in connection with the first anniversary of the Soviet-led invasion of the country.

U.S. embassy officials said Gary Baxter, 18, of Santa Rosa, walked into the embassy building yesterday. He was tired but in no need of medical attention.

An embassy spokesman said Baxter was given a passport to replace one he had lost and put on a train to Vienna. Police had denied U.S. representatives the right to visit Baxter while he was in jail.

Rogers' Aides Play Down CIA Luncheon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department has declined to go along with a suggestion that Secretary William P. Rogers is angry at the Central Intelligence Agency for putting out word that the Soviets may be thinking about an air strike on Red China's atomic plants.

Press officer Robert J. McCloskey refused yesterday to take any side publicly in what he portrayed as competitive newspaper enterprise over a lunch CIA chief Richard Helms had with some reporters earlier this week.

Helms has been identified—by newsmen who were not at the lunch and therefore not bound by no-quotation rules—as the source of stories dealing with the possibility of such a Soviet attack and about CIA's claim of innocence in the Green Beret murder charges in Saigon.

CIA's longstanding practice is public silence on overseas developments and anti-CIA allegations poured forth daily by foes abroad.

When CIA feels maligned by stories over which other U.S. government agencies may have some control, it sometimes asks them to issue a statement which will put the CIA in a better light.

CIA men also from time to time have explained their case to congressmen—who hold CIA's pursestrings—and on a "don't quote me" basis to newsmen.

In the Green Beret case, the Army so far has refused to publicly disavow defense lawyer allegations in behalf of the arrested men that the CIA ordered the killing of a suspected Vietnamese double agent. CIA contends it issued no such order. The Army is keeping silent pending further investigation of the Green Beret group.

In the Sino-Soviet dispute, there is conjecture as to whether the Soviets themselves might be floating the notion of a possible attack on Chinese nuclear installations in order to scare Peking. It is also speculated that anti-Soviet Communist sources may be promoting the surprise attack idea for their own psychological warfare purposes.

McCloskey quoted a past Rogers statement to this effect, and when asked about what was attributed to Helms he would not subscribe to a suggestion that the CIA chief had damaged Rogers' efforts for U.S. neutrality in the Sino-Soviet quarrel.

While Helms himself was reported out of town Friday, CIA colleagues expected he would be embarrassed by his identification with the recent stories. It would not be CIA's first embarrassment in print. To take some examples from this decade:

In 1960 the Soviets shot down a CIA U-2 surveillance plane deep inside Russian territory. A false CIA cover story was first issued throught he State Department. President Eisenhower wound up publicly accepting responsibility for the spy flight.

When the Cuban invasion failed the following year, Kennedy administration officials pinned much of the blame on CIA.

More recently, CIA was the target of public brickbats upon disclosure that it had been paying secret funds to student and other organizations which were in competition with Communist agencies in foreign countries. The Johnson administration ended the practice, which CIA sources said had been assigned to them by government superiors early in the days of the cold war.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, Hubert H. Humphrey, Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, now the Democratic national chairman.

Assessing Nixon's performance, Republicans generally agreed that the cautious, go-slow approach at the White House has been good for the government and for the mood of the nation.

"He avoided trying to do everything overnight, and this has regulated what was getting to be an almost frenetic national pulse," said Gov. Tom McCall, Oregon Republican.

"The most impressive single facet of the Nixon administration has been the thoughtful, well-studied approach that has characterized every effort," said GOP Gov. Louie B. Nunn of Kentucky.

Gov. Raymond P. Shafer, Pennsylvania Republican, agreed. The absence of hysteria is providing the nation with a rational base for setting goals and establishing priorities," he said.

Some Democrats found the presidential pace grounds for criticism.

"I didn't expect a lot out of him when he started, so I haven't been particularly disappointed," said Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri.

"There has been a general lack of direction and a moving from one pole to another," said Democratic Gov. Kennety M. Curtis of Maine. Curtis said Nixon has made no progress toward ending inflation, has given "indications of a regression" in civil rights, and has not produced any changes in American foreign policy.

Republicans rated foreign policy a Nixon strong point. "The attacks made on Mr. Nixon concerning the Vietnam war have been politically motivated," said Gov. Warren Knowles of Wisconsin.

"Some political leaders who helped lead our country into the present situation now claim to have all the answers and are trying to undermine Nixon's attempts to reverse the previous administration's course," Knowles said.

cameraman was pinned against a wall by a demonstrator. He was pulled to safety by other workers.

Work will resume on the construction projects Tuesday.

Michael Dismond, a leader of the coalition, refused to say what his group would do if no progress is reached in the talks.

Barr has refused to disclose details of the negotiations to date or say when negotiations will be held during the weekend.

"While I cannot divulge the latest developments in negotiations, I can report that all parties are committed to devising a workable training program and discussions have started to reach this goal," he said.

No further demonstrations have been announced for the next few days by either side.

Police Supt. James W. Slusser said he told the construction workers yesterday the rights of both sides would be protected when work resumes.

"There will probably be a demonstration Tuesday," he said, "but they will not bother your right to work. We will guarantee anyone's right to peacefully demonstrate."

The coalition leaders planned to meet today to decide whether the public confrontations will continue next week.

The march yesterday was orderly until the workers reached City Hall. Accompanied by motorcycle policemen, the workers had marched to the cheers and hand waves of pedestrians and office workers in city buildings.

Some signs read "White pride and union unity."

Booking Made On AWOL Count

Claude Melvin Phillips, 24, of 419 Drake Avenue, Marin City, was booked into Marin County Jail yesterday on suspicion of being AWOL and resisting arrest following a fight with four officers, the sheriff's deputies reported.

Phillips was in jail in lieu of $625 bail and is to appear in Municipal Court at 2 p.m. Tuesday.

Deputy Robert Gaddini said he met Phillips at 7:01 p.m. on Drake Avenue and told him he was wanted by the Armed Forces Police for being AWOL.

Phillips said he would not go to jail and fought with Gaddini and three other deputies for several minutes before being handcuffed, deputies said.

No Trace Of Youth In Ocean Swimming

Marin County sheriff's deputies said today that there is still no trace of Bobby Norton, 19, of Vallejo, reported missing while swimming at Stinson Beach State Park Thursday.

Norton's friend, Ronald Grove, 19, of Suisun told deputies that Norton, swimming in a pair of blue denim pants, had been in the water 30 to 45 minutes when Grove reported him missing. Coast Guard helicopters and a boat looked in vain for Norton, deputies reported.

Pair Accused Of Big Movie Camera Thefts

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two Bay Area men have been accused by the FBI of stealing $61,000 worth of movie cameras from Pier 27 here last June 27.

Edward Bardyszewski, 50, of Walnut Creek was arrested Thursday and charged with removing three pallets of cameras from the pier, Charles W. Bates, FBI agent in charge at San Francisco, said.

Ronald Schmidt, 29, of Novato, rented a truck to haul away the cameras, which were to have been shipped to Chicago by the Santa Fe Railroad, Bates said.

Bardyszewski, held in lieu of $7,500 bond, and Schmidt, free on his own recognizance, probably will get a preliminary hearing next month.

Probe Made Into Threat On Pair

Sheriff's officers were investigating today threats made to two Independent-Journal employees who were stopped while on their route Thursday afternoon in Marin City.

Craig DuMonte, I-J circulation department driver, said that a young man crossed Drake Avenue in front of the truck which was headed toward Hayden's Market. DuMonte said he stopped to avoid hitting the youth, who then said, "If you move, I'll shoot you in the head."

A crowd of 20 or 30 persons gathered, according to DuMonte, and the youth went to a pickup truck which had pulled alongside and asked the driver for a gun.

When the request was turned down, DuMonte and his assistant, David White, left after being told "to move out and don't come back."

Dist. Atty. Edmund S. Dinis has said an autopsy is central to the inquest.

However, in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., County Judge Bernard C. Brominski said he will not announce "until Tuesday or Wednesday at the earliest" whether he will grant Dinis' request for exhumation of Miss Kopechne's body for an autopsy.

Burglars Loot Three Cars

Three cars were burgled Thursday night while their owners were camping at Bootjack Camp on Mount Tamalpais, sheriff's deputies reported today.

Photographer Frank P. Morell, 24, of Mill Valley, reported a loss of $700 in photographic equipment and $10 in Kennedy half dollars; Russell O. McFarland, 32, of San Gabriel, reported loss of a $100 portable television set and Nanette M. Rogier, 20, of Mill Valley, said two purses containing $20 in traveler's checks and $9 in cash were taken from her vehicle, deputies said.

In another theft, New York actress Mary L. Hutton, 25, reported that between 4 and 4:15 p.m. yesterday, someone stole $270 worth of articles from her car while parked at Mount Tamalpais State Park, sheriff's deputies said.

RABIES

In Death, Boy Serves Science

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Medical science kept Tommy Buchmann alive for five months after he was mauled by a rabid bobcat April 1. The little Lakeside boy, who died yesterday, also helped medical science, his doctor says.

Dr. Samuel T. Giammona of University Hospital's pediatrics staff, said Tommy made two important contributions before he died, two days after his third birthday.

"We certainly learned how to manage an acutely ill person over a long period of time," Giammona said of the intensive care given Tommy since he lapsed into a coma April 28, never to regain consciousness.

"This could be important when science is close to a cure for a particular disease and it is essential to keep a patient alive until it does.

"Secondly, it has stressed to us that even after being given the rabies vaccine there is a risk that a person still can contract rabies. We had not thought that before."

Tommy lived longer than any human rabies victim in medical history, surpassing the 63-day survival of a 13-year-old Elk City, Kan., boy last year. Why?

"It is hard to say," the doctor said. "He had a very strong constitution for a child and, of course, he had meticulous care."

Giammona said no new drug or treatment accounted for the boy's hold on life.

The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Buchmann, are poultry ranchers with two other children. They will not receive a doctor bill, a hospital spokesman said.

Antisex Education Bill Signed

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Ronald Reagan has signed one of the most controversial bills of the 1969 legislative session, permitting parents to withdraw their children from sex education classes.

The measure by Sen. John G. Schmitz, R-Tustin, and other bills, resolutions and proposals of the state Board of Education, were the subject of lengthy and sometimes heated hearings during the session.

Some witnesses advocated compulsory instruction in "family life" while others contended it should be completely forbidden in the classroom and left to the discretion of the parents.

The Schmitz bill requires parents to request in writing that their child be excused from the class. Failure to comply by a teacher could result in suspension or revocation of credentials.

It also requires a teacher to make available to parents before the class is taught any materials to be used in instruction.

Opponents of the measure charged this would prevent a teacher from using any new material which was made available after the school year began.

Originally Schmitz' bill would have charged a teacher with a misdemeanor crime if he violated the parents' wishes. But the Assembly amended the penalty to suspension or revocation of the credential.

"As a teacher myself, I think it is probably debatable which is worse," Schmitz said.

A companion resolution by Schmitz calling on school districts to impose a moratorium on any new sex education courses was defeated by the Assembly Education Committee.

The full Assembly killed a bill designed to improve the training of sex education teachers.

The bill by Assemblyman Alan Sieroty, D-Beverly Hills, required the state Department of Education to evaluate materials available for sex education classes.

It directed the department to work with colleges and universities to improve teacher training.

But opponents of that measure feared it would encourage more schools to establish sex education classes.

OBITUARIES

FRANCIS BOCCALEONI

Requiem Mass for Francis C. Boccaleoni, 45, of Petaluma, will be said at 11 a.m. Tuesday at St. James Church, Petaluma. Burial will be at Calvary Cemetery.

Boccaleoni was pronounced dead on arrival Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Hillcrest Hospital. His co-workers at the Ribley Dairy, 3571 Old Adobe Road, had discovered him slumped in a milking barn. A routine coroner's investigation is being conducted.

For the past three years he had lived at the Ribley Dairy farm.

He is survived by his wife, Maryann; two sons, Dale and Leonard of the family home; a daughter, Loretta, at home; his mother, Johannah Boccaleoni of Sebastopol, and a brother, Lucky Boccaleoni of Willits, Mendocino County.

agreed to add certain "extras," called change orders, to the contract. As of late last week, the Post said, these amounted to more than 100 small orders for additions to the contract—resulting in an additional $384,000 being paid to Baltimore Contractors.

After completion, the Post said, Baltimore Contractors filed claims for $5,021,199 more, contending the government had made special requests of the contractor on the job and that some information on soil conditions had been in error—costing the contractor additional money.

NOT BEEN PAID

The newspaper said most of these claims by the firm have not been paid by the government.

The paper said the allegations to federal investigators include the contention that Long and Brewster exerted direct pressure on the architect's office to get those extras, and as much of the claims as possible, approved. It is alleged, the Post said, that the senators were to share a percentage of any such windfall profits reaped by the contractors.

Long also said last night that Brewster was "trying to do what he could to help a Baltimore contractor. The entire Maryland delegation, to a man—including Sen. Joseph D. Tydings—tried to help him," the Post said.

The Post said Long added that Brewster "asked me as a friend if it would be all right with me to have my administrative assistant (Bob Hunter) help him help a Baltimore constituent.

"As a favor to a friend, I permitted him (Brewster) to borrow the help of my administrative assistant to help plead the man's case (Frenkil). Dan said he had no one in his office with the expertise of Hunter.

"This man (Frenkil) had a claim—it was a meritorious claim—and the man has been working on it for two years."

The Post reported Long said there has been a "clear-cut case of theft of campaign funds by someone . . . And I understand these aren't the only allegations he's been making."

"That grand jury started out investigating what happened to the money that went into Dan Brewster's campaign fund. The way the (grand jury) dragged me into this was that a friend of mine contributed $2,000 to (Brewster's) campaign. That check went into the campaign fund and went back out again," Long added, according to the Post.

Gregory Russell Weds Anne E. Cunnyngham

In an evening ceremony Friday at Trinity Baptist Church in Concord, Gregory Bruce Russell of San Rafael claimed Anne Elizabeth Cunnyngham as his bride. The wedding had a Renaissance flavor, with early Baroque music played at the ceremony.

Anne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Harold Cunnyngham of Concord. Her sister, Catherine, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Rebecca Knuteson and Twylla Anderson.

Ronald Russell served his brother as best man. They are the sons of Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Ruhl J. Russell of San Rafael. Seating the guests were another brother of the bridegroom, Douglas Russell, and John Moore, William Carter and John Limpo.

A reception followed at Fair Oaks Baptist Church and the couple left on a wedding trip to Southern California. They will return to live in Daly City.

Anne will be graduated with a music degree from San Francisco State College next year and her husband will continue graduate studies there. He holds the A.B. degree in music from San Francisco State.

Add Warmth And Dash With A Variety Of Coat Linings

By EUNICE FARMER

I am planning a winter coat for college this year and would like some suggestions on what to use as warm linings and interlinings.

CAROL B.

DEAR CAROL,

There are many variations to the ordinary type lining that would not only add warmth to your coat but dash as well. I have used lightweight wool knits as a lining, these could also coordinate with a dress with an attached hood that could add additional warmth around your neck.

You could line the wool coat with corduroy, which gives a warm and comfortable feeling. However, because of the thickness of this fabric, I wouldn't advise using it in the sleeves.

There is an insulated lining that is coated with aluminum that has been highly advertised. I personally don't care much for this because it feels cold to slip on (guess it's a mental attitude, but it doesn't seem warm to me).

There is also a lining that is satin on one side and wool on the other which works beautifully. Then you may go way out and use one of the new fake furs or fleeces for a lining. I would use one of the above suggestions and avoid an interlining.

THANKS ONCE again for coming forth with loads of answers to a reader's question. Mrs. K. S. wrote asking for information about a tape measure converting the metric system of measure used in Europe to inches.

It seems they can be located in most large cities. However, until you run into a shop that carries them, Mrs. C. S. suggests you take your metric tape measure and staple it to one side of your regular tape measure. In this way you will have both of them in front of you, besides putting two of them together will definitely make them stronger. (Again thanks to you readers, I can pass on the following information: 100 centimeters equal one meter. One meter equals 39.37 inches.)

"Here's a little trick for filling the bobbin that makes my sewing easier. Don't unthread the machine to fill a bobbin from the spool of thread you are using. Just flick the thread out of the upper tension wheels, put the machine in neutral and fill away. The thread flows smoothly through the other gadgets as well as the needle." (Bravo, this is one of the neatest tricks you readers have ever sent me. Re-filling a bobbin is one of those little aggravating chores, but with this new suggestion, you don't even mind running out of thread.)

DEAR MRS. FARMER,

Is there an easy or attractive way to finish a vest out of corduroy? I have made them reversible but somehow they never seem to look professional. Since so many school girls like the tunic type vests that don't button, I thought you might have a suggestion.

MRS. V. P.

DEAR MRS. V. P.,

A California manufacturer has designed one of the most attractive vest type corduroy ensembles I have ever seen. The tunic vest was coordinated with bell-bottom pants to be worn with a long sleeve shirt of a soft fabric. The vest was finished with a self binding of corduroy about 1 inch wide. This must be cut on the bias in order to work around the curves and prevent excess bulkiness.

There is no reason why this vest couldn't be reversible. You could use an attractive print on one side, place the two layers of the assembled vest together (wrong sides touching) pin and baste the outer edges together and machine stitch the outer edges to hold together. You must machine stitch them about ⅞ inch from the cut edge, then cut away the original ⅝ inch seam allowance and finish the raw edges with your bias strips of corduroy. A matching print cotton blouse could make an attractive alternative for an extra blouse.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Better She Should Learn Now About Her Nice-Guy Boy Friend

DEAR HELEN:

My boy friend is the sweetest, most gentle guy you'd ever want to meet. My big worry is this:

Tod is a pretty fantastic all-around athlete. His big ambition is to be come a high school athletics teacher. Lately, however, he has made friends with a fellow who, having both money and charm, tends to get just what he wants — especially girls. Tod seems to be trying his route. This guy, Jim, has got him drinking and constantly introduces him to fast girls.

I don't mind him going out, but Jim has potential power to ruin Tod's chances for a scholarship. I don't want to lose him, but mainly, I don't want him to lose himself.

Tod's father died when he was young and he has always needed someone to look up to. But Jim isn't a good idol. If I say anything against Jim, it will make things worse. What can I do? — PEGGY

DEAR PEGGY:

If Tod has got it, he'll soon outgrow Jim. If he hasn't, better you should learn now than later. Wait and hope, and make it easier on yourself by dating other guys. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Every species of animal has some kind of protection. Porcupines have quills. Man is gifted with highly developed brains for his protection. Yet we cannot settle our differences except by murdering one another like animals.

Then they glorify the glitter and excitement, the heroic advance, the brawny returning war heros. They leave out the stinking reality of war: The shattered homes, the kids starving, the broken bodies.

Why can't we human beings have better sense? I am only 13 but I hope to be of the generation that ends war? — NOT LIKE AN ANIMAL

DEAR NOT:

I hope you will be. And if you live up to your excellent letter, I'm sure you'll do more than your part to help bring about peace.

But you don't give four-legged animals a fair shake: Those of the same species seldom fight to kill — only to frighten and subdue. They hardly ever deliberately murder their own kind. Only humans, among the higher mammals, do that — H.

DEAR HELEN:

My boy friend and I have been going steady for two years and now we're engaged, but we can't get married until we finish college — a long wait. We'll be away at school three years.

We are just perfect for each other except for his mother. She's a witch. I'm petrified of her. She is so mean to her own daughter that they don't speak. Rich is an only son, and terribly babied, so she's going the other way with him. She expects him to jump when she speaks — and he does. Our only fights have been about my not wanting to live even in the same state with her. He thinks we should live close. He says I just don't want to accept her — after she has done evertyhing sneaky to break us up.

Is there a chance for a marriage that won't be in-lawed to death? — D. B.

DEAR D:

You say there's still a long wait for marriage. Why not set the in-law thing aside until later — when perhaps it will solve itself. Head-on fights put Rick on the defensive, but a gradual loosening of ties will probably come naturally. — H.

DRAMA REVIEW

Tent Revival Time In The Old South

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

The Smoky Mountain country has invaded Mill Valley in the form of the Homestead Players production "Dark of the Moon."

However the group is ending its run tonight of the stimulating production. That in itself is a sad note.

Some may call the Howard Richardson - William Berney play "camp." But if one knows the spiritualism of the Bible Belt South and its hypocritical approach to life one will have a bellyfull of laughs.

The group has taken literary license with the show and has come up with an evangelistic revival which sets "old southerners a choppin' and a stompin'."

Had this reviewer known that "Dark of the Moon" was closing tonight it would have been seen earlier. Alas.

However this is not an apology to the Homestead Players noted for its fine level of productions.

This interpertation as we stated earlier as "high camp," is most irreverent to the "good Christian cause." It's kind of like a "Shall We Gather at the River" production as John Evans as John pleads his cause to our ever present human world.

Evans is one of the most delightful actor that this reviewer has seen in a Marin production in some time. He can portray the lover as well the fighter with equal skill. It is sad, however, that his earthly lover Jama Tegeler as Barbara Allen is not up to Evans' fine performance.

The Conjur Man played by J. Dennis Brown and his Christian counterpart Preacher Haggler portrayed by John Peebles were finely woven. The evil ex-lover Marvin Hudgens played by Robert Moore puts the production into reality with the age-old question, "Will evil triumph over good."

It's a shame this production has only one more airing (at 8:30 p.m. today at Mill Valley's Brown's Hall) for it's a delightful two hours of tent camp revival.

Judge Halts 'Nudie' Movie Surprise Raids

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Surprise police raids on "nudie" movie theaters have been effectively squelched by a federal court ruling.

U.S. District Court Judge Alfonso Zirpoli yesterday ordered that confiscated nudie movies be returned to three theater owners whose establishments were raided by police.

Zirpoli ruled unconstitutional any seizures without a prior hearing to determine if films are obscene defined by California law.

He also continued an earlier order prohibiting the arrest of theater patrons.

Citing a U.S. Supreme Court decision, Zirpoli said a prior hearing would insure that expression "would not be suppressed without contest."

He said he recognized the "frustrating and difficult problems" of enforcing the obscenity laws, adding without explanation that there were ways to combat obscene films.

The basic issue was whether the police violated the Constitution in seizing the films, rather than the question of obscenity, he said.

"The court in no way approves the films," he said.

"They are probably obscene and if again exhibited may well be subject to seizure after an adversary proceeding on the issue of obscenity . . ."

Ed Nevin, head of the police vice squad, said the decision has ruined chances of prosecution.

"We don't have the evidence now to go to court," he said.

Deputy City Atty. Leroy Cannon said the city would appeal within the 10-days before Zirpoli's order goes into effect.

Judge Zirpoli also denied theatre owners suits asking for a restraining order against Municipal Court criminal proceedings against them stemming from the raids.

The suits were filed by Les Natali, owner of The Movie, raided Jan. 5, 1968; Alex DeRency, owner of the Screening Room, raided last Aug. 13; and Demich, Inc., owner of the O'Farrell Theatre, raided July 25 and Aug. 12.

Colorado Next

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan ends his vacation with three days in Colorado next week, two days in his office, and then a trip to the Philippines as President Richard M. Nixon's personal representative to the dedication of a new cultural center in Manila.

The schedule released by his press office yesterday shows him booked for the National Governor's Conference at Colorado Springs tomorrow through Tuesday, when he returns to Sacramento after an absence of almost a month. The Manila trip is set for Friday.

Once Again They Come To Hear Groovy Music

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

By the hundreds of thousands they gather—with their long hair, their bare feet, their sleeping bags and, in some cases, their drugs—to groove together and to hear the greats and the unknowns of the world of rock music.

They crowded onto England's Isle of Wight, to a dusty dragstrip near Dallas, Tex., and to a grassy ranch in the mountain-rimmed country south of Olympia, Wash.

Festival organizers and local police teamed to handle the massive security and logistics problems posed by the hordes of young people.

At Olympia, the organizers had to overcome legal blockades thrown up by local residents who feared a repeat of the traffic jams, chaos and litter that marked the arrival of more than 300,000 rock fans two weeks ago at White Lake, N.Y., during a similar festival.

Police expected more than 200,000 fans would be on the Isle of Wight by tomorrow when the festival's main attraction, folk-rock singer Bob Dylan, takes the stand.

It will be the first public performance in about 12 months for the 28-year-old American singer, who is coming back after nearly three years of semiretirement. Also expected are the Beatles, the Rolling Stones and, reportedly, Elizabeth Taylor.

This cast was drawing youths from Britain, Europe and the United States. They came to the island off England's southern coast by ferry and hovercraft at a rate police estimated yesterday was 2,000 an hour.

The vanguard of an expected 100,000 rock fans were already encamped yesterday in the sprawling federal park lands around Garza-Little Elm Reservoir near Lewisville, Tex. The park is near the Dallas International Motor Speedway, where a three-day festival opens today.

Among the attractions at the Texas festival are Janis Joplin, Herbi Mann, Led Zeppelin, Johnny Winter and Tony Joe White.

Another three-day rockfest opens today on a 200-acre ranch 30 miles south of Olympia after a state supreme court decision yesterday cleared the way.

The high court, by a 5-2 ruling, nullified a superior court injunction against the Sky River Rock Festival and Lighter Than Air Fair. Five residents had sought the injunction, fearing damage to their property, fire danger and annoyance from the loud noise and the crowd of fans.

Some Lewisville area residents extended a warmer welcome to the youths flooding into their town of 7,000. "Welcome Beautiful People" signs greeted the rock fans.

"The merchants are making money," said Lewisville Police Chief Ralph Adams.

The 100,000 residents of Wight seemed stoicly resigned to the swarm of young people invading their normally quiet island. But all days off were canceled for Wight's 130-man police force and 100 extra security guards were hired to control the crowds. Police said drugs were their biggest problem.

Money was the biggest worry for Ron Foulk, one of three brothers who invested $240,000 in the music festival. Many of the fans didn't have two pennies to rub together, he said, let alone the $4.80 for a ticket. Only 40,000 tickets had been sold by Friday.

"We haven't got the bread to buy tickets," admitted one member of the early crowd. "We're going through a hole in the hedge."

Harris Arrested

LONDON (AP) — British actor Richard Harris was arrested and charged early today of assaulting two policemen outside a West End cabaret.

Police said Harris, star of the movie "Camelot," was detained after a disturbance outside the Talk of the Town cabaret, where Sammy Davis Jr. is appearing.

Span Board Votes To Continue Jump Patrols

A six-month test of a roving, two-man patrol to prevent suicides on Golden Gate Bridge was such a success that bridge and highway district directors voted yesterday to continue it indefinitely.

Suicides have been cut by almost 70 per cent, reported Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring, and about 10 persons were prevented from jumping for every one that did jump.

Suicide prevention experts have told the bridge board that most persons prevented from suicide never try again if given some treatment.

In the past five years, Luehring said, the number of suicides each year averaged 16, compared with 48 attempts a year. Since the program started this year, there have been five suicides and 54 attempts, he said.

Luehring attributed the "dramatic drop" in suicides not only to the roving patrol, but also to training given district employees on how to detect and prevent suicides, and aid by the California Highway Patrol.

The roving patrol, he added, "has been quite effective in assisting traffic," having made 236 assists to motorists during the six months. This sum included 85 out of gas, 86 stalled, 50 with flat tires, and 15 accidents.

Golden Gaate Bridge and Highway District directors also:

NAME — Voted to change the name of the district to the Golden Gate Bridge, Highway and Transit District when a new state law empowering the district to operate all forms of transit is effective in November.

COMMUTERS — Postponed to next month a proposal that there be a 20-day cut in the time commuters may use discount tickets on the bridge, pending a board decision to get into the transit business, when all commute books may be eliminated.

ONE-WAY — Received report from Luehring that a 3.02 per cent loss in revenue under the one-way toll collection system was "almost exactly offset" by a $191,854 saving because only 47 toll collectors were needed, instead of 64.

COURT — Received report from the district's attorney, Jerome B. White, that a test case of the validity of county supervisors' sitting as district directors will be argued in Sonoma County Superior Court, Santa Rosa, at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday.

INSURANCE — Received an opinion from White that the district would not have the right to carry self-insurance.

SLUGS — Received report from Gordon E. Dahlgren, district auditor, that automatic toll collection machines, which may be tried at the bridge, are having problems elsewhere with drivers using coins from a gasoline company game.

TEST — Received report from Dist. Engineer Robert E. Shields that devices to register vehicles automatically for monthly toll collection will be installed on commuter buses and directors cars next week. The 18 directors pay no toll, but the devices will be installed to check the system.

BICYCLES — Received report from Shields that opening ceremonies for the bicycle way across the bridge will be held either the first or second Saturday in October.

ANNEX — Set a rules and policy committee meeting at 3 p.m. on Sept. 11 in district offices at the toll plaza to consider Lake County's bid to annex to the district, and agreed to meet soon in Lake County as "a committee of the whole" to acquaint themselves with the county.

TELEVISION — Received report from Luehring of "tremendous" results with a test of closed circuit television cameras that would permit surveillance of the roadway at night as well as by day. The manufacturer, Motorola, will present a proposal for selling the district the equipment in a few weeks, he said.

JANITOR — Authorized Luehring to call for bids for janitorial services for the administration building, a step he recommended "to save several thousand dollars."

BIDS — Received only one bid, for $10,809, from the Amercoat Corp. of Oakland to provide 918 gallons of inorganic zinc silicate paint, and declared Beatty Industries of Brisbane lower of two bidders, at $18,427, for 13 air-powered rigging hoists.

Little Hope On Inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wholesale price index has taken a bit of a dip but a government economist says there's apparently little hope for an early easing of inflation.

Arnold Chase, assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said Thursday a preliminary report on wholesale prices this month shows a one-tenth of one per cent decline in the index to 113.2, but "I don't think that indicates any break."

The index means that it now costs $113.20 for wholesale goods that cost $100 in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based. The current figure is 4.1 per cent higher than a year ago.

Chase said the wholesale price index went down because of a leveling off of high food prices. He noted that industrial raw materials rose three-tenths of one per cent at the same time. The August boost in raw materials indicates more bad news later for consumers in prices of housing, clothing, automobiles and other durable goods.

The bureau's consumer price index—measuring typical living costs—reached 128.2 last month, meaning it now costs $12.82 for food, clothing, housing, transportation, medical care, and recreation that cost $10 a decade ago.

Meanwhile, President Richard M. Nixon and five of his key economic advisers conferred at the Western White House in California Thursday. Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler was mildly optimistic after the session.

Ziegler said he talked with the economists and they feel there are some indications there is a "beginning in the cooling-off period of the inflationary tendency." He cited the wholesale price index and a decline in reorders for durable goods.

Letters Carrying Shakespeare Mark

All letters mailed from the San Rafael Post Office through Sept. 10 are being franked with the Marin Shakespeare Festival seal in honor of the festival.

The festival company is presenting performances of "Two Gentlemen of Verona," "Richard II" and "Midsummer Night's Dream" each weekend at 8 p.m. through Sept. 27.

Closed Session Set On Public Works Personnel

The Novato City Council will hold a closed meeting at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Novato Community House to discuss personnel in the public works department.

At last Tuesday's council meeting, the proposal by Public Works Director Clifford E. Temps to create a maintenance supervisor, demote the existing foreman to leadman and create three other leadman positions drew fire from the city council. Councilman Babe Silva defended the foreman, Wade Lackey, and denounced his demotion after eight years with the city.

The council then set the closed meeting to discuss Lackey's position and the creation of the other leadman and supervisorial positions.

Art Gallery Sets Preview

A preview opening of a new Sausalito art gallery called the Phoenix 3 Art Galaxie will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. tomorrow.

The gallery, to be operated by long-time Sausalito artists Donald and Lynn Wood, is at 1306 Bridgeway and will feature hand-crafted jewelry, ceramics, pottery and metal sculpture as well as paintings.

The gallery will be open daily from 2 to 5 p.m. and 1 to 7 p.m. on weekends.

Nader-Style Raiders Back To School

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government was Naderized this summer.

After three months of "reaching for the cobwebs" in federal agencies, Ralph Nader's raiders, crusaders, invaders, and graders have dispersed to their schools and regular jobs.

Now they will put it all down on paper and tell the public what they concluded about the agencies that are supposed to be serving the public.

What they did this summer is perhaps without precedent: 100 outsiders, private citizens, roaming through the halls and offices of government, putting operations under the microscope, evaluating them for the public.

ONLY SEVEN THEN

Last summer, Nader's raiders numbered but seven. But they managed to shake up the Federal Trade Commission with a report highly critical of that agency's role in protecting the consumer.

This year, the summer project expanded to scrutinize the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Civil Aeronautics Board, the Food and Drug Administration, the Agriculture and Labor departments, and the air and water pollution-control agencies of the Departments of Interior and Health, Education and Welfare.

Their findings, Nader says, are not expected until late this year. Before leaving the project this week, however, its six directors and Nader issued a 20-page indictment of the information policies of many of the agencies, accusing them of violating the Freedom of Information Act in letter and spirit.

'REACH FOR COBWEBS'

What they did, from June 10 until now, Nader says, was to "reach for the cobwebs — to find out how the agencies actually operate, to what extent they are carrying out their declared missions, and how they relate among each other and with the public."

Nader said one of the key purposes of the summer project was "to show how much change can be brought about in government when citizens know how to penetrate the secrecy of these agencies."

The investigators were students and graduates of law, medicine and engineering from Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Ohio State and Western Reserve Universities and the Universities of Chicago, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Southern California.

Working under six project directors, they split up into teams for their sorties into the agencies. They sought interviews with personnel at all levels and tried to read as many documents and writing papers as were made available.

RECEPTION VARIES

Their reception varied, they reported this week. At the National Air pollution Control Administration, in the Welfare Department, they were invited in for a full briefing with the top staff and were given virtually free access to people and papers throughout the agency.

But at the federal Water Pollution Control Agency in the Interior Department, they complained, monitors were required to overhear every interview, documents disappeared from libraries in mid-reading, and finally they had to appeal to Herbert G. Klein, President Nixon's director of communications, to shake loose some information.

Consumer Adviser Trying To Reorganize From Top Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer adviser Virginia Knauer is trying to revitalize three key advisory commissions, including the top-level administration panel designed to coordinate the multitude of consumer programs scattered throughout federal agencies.

Up to now, according to one aide who also worked under presidential consumer assistant Betty Furness, the commissions have been "windows on the administration" where officials would explain what was going on rather than make proposals for consumer programs.

The top-level panel composed of cabinet officers and regulatory agency heads, for instance, hasn't met for more than a year.

The 12-man panel—The President's Committee on Consumer Interests—originally was intended to coordinate the 400 or so consumer programs they oversee.

Mrs. Knauer's staff has started a review of the programs, and she wants the panel to be ready to act on the results, as well as the proposals she hopes to elicit from the other two commissions.

"We have suspicions of what's wrong, you know," Mrs. Knauer says of the study. "But if we are to implement the changes we will need a coordinating body."

Mrs. Knauer says she hopes to get more fresh ideas out of the President's Consumer Advisory Council, composed of college professors, housewives lawyers, credit union managers—"people with an expertise in the field," as she explains it.

This is the 12-member council which produced the report that led to Miss Furness' proposals last January for preferably voluntary guidelines on appliance warranties.

Industry officials are conferring with Mrs. Knauer's office on the proposals.

Mrs. Knauer says she wants more of such reports and has offered 17 names of the prospective members for President Nixon's approval. She says she'd like to expand the panel to about 15 so it can organize subcommittees to do the leg work.

The nominations are still pending at the White House.

The third advisory commission, which is scheduled to hold its first meeting with Mrs. Knauer Sept. 23, is the 37-member ad hoc advisory committee on consumer interests.

This panel is composed of representatives from labor unions, civil rights groups, women's clubs, consumer federations—"anyone with an identifiable consumer program."

Mrs. Knauer says she is anxious to draw proposals from this group, which has been dormant since the waning days of the Lyndon B. Johnson administration.

Meeting Delayed

The Marin Senior Squadron IV, California Wing, Civil Air Patrol, will meet at 8 p.m., Sept. 8, at the Hamilton Air Force Base squadron headquarters and not this Monday, as normally scheduled, due to the Labor Day weekend, Lt. Col. Francis E. Torr, squadron commander, reported.

Pioneer Brain Surgery Is Used On Sex Crime Deviates

GOETTINGEN, Germany (GF) — For several years, surgeons here having been undertaking pioneer experiments in brain surgery aimed at stopping excessive sex drives from resulting in crime. The operations are only performed on people with a history of repeating such crimes.

In the surgery, a needle-thin electric probe is sunk into the brain at the right side with the aid of a stereotactic aiming instrument. The progress of the needle is followed by X-ray until it reaches the so-called "sexual centers" — there are two of them — in the mid-brain. The subdominant center is then destroyed by electric charge transmitted via the needle.

Doctors have long been aware of the existence of the hypthalmus' sexual center, even though its exact role in the overall sexual function is still, by and large, unknown.

Nonetheless, the two leaders of the team of Goettingen surgeons performing the operations, neurologists Hans Orthner and Fritz Roeder, recently reported clear success with the surgery in some cases.

One of the cases involved a youth leader, who was faced with a lengthy jail term because of homosexual misdeeds. After the operation and return to society, the youth leader said: "My feelings toward male children have been practically non-existent since the operation. On the other hadn, I now have a fully normal relationship with women, who used to turn me off."

The Goettingen surgeons believe the success in such cases has been achieved by enabling patients to reestablish a large measure of control over their sexual behavior after the operations.

The team has been roundly criticized by some other medical investigators. The latter charge that the Goettingen surgeons do not know if tneir operations are also affecting other areas of their patients' lives — for example, their intellectual abilities —since the precise function of the sexual centers remains undefined.

However, the Goettingen team challenges the credibility of this argument on grounds such side effects did not occur in any of the operations so far performed.

LONDON NOT READY

Giant Headache From Big Jets

By BILL LANG

LONDON (Toronto News Service) — Heathrow Airport officials are not looking forward to Christmas this year.

There is a cloud over the month of December — a jumbo, jet-sized cloud.

On December 15 the first Boeing 747 from the United States will touch down to disgorge 380 people and a host of problems.

With the dawn of the jumbo era less than four months away, Heathrow was made painfully aware that it was poorly prepared.

A new $500,000 luggage conveyor has been quietly running amok since it was switched on last May. Recently it confirmed to everybody that it was a failure by conking out.

The robot conveyor was the pride of Heathrow's new $24 million International Terminal One. The idea was to pick up luggage from 94 reception desks and quickly slide it along miles of routes to departing planes.

As well, the robot has mastered the art of ripping off labels. It averages 250 a day.

Thousands of fondly packed suitcases are piling up in the Terminal One reclaim area. Many will never again see their luckless owners.

Hundreds of people are arriving at overseas vacation resorts with only the clothes they stand in, consoled by the knowledge that their goods could be anywhere in the world.

Airport manager Wally Waldron ordered 50 airport workers to the baggage barricades. Two electronics experts have been stationed on 24-hour watch over the madcap monster.

Meanwhile, jumbo day gets nearer. It may well be a jumbo jumble.

In 1970, 15 of the jumbo jets will touch down at Hearthrow daily. By 1975 there will be 20 arrivals an hour at peak times. At peak, 7,000 passengers will have to go through customs and immigration controls, meet their 14,000 pieces of luggage and leave the airport each hour. The 20,000 friends who have come to meet them will need parking space.

In that hour, the Boeings will be refuelled, cleaned out, restocked with food, fitted with replacement kitchens, recrewed, refilled with passengers and freight and in the air again. Fifty specially designed vehicles, including a 70-ton towing tractor will have buzzed about, helping with the chores.

Luggage will be the biggest bugbear. About 100,000 cases go astray in the world's airports every day. Future luggage systems will look like roller coasters with suitcases returning to owners on trolleys summoned automatically when magnetized, coded cards are presented to a dispensing machine.

Passports may be merely coded cards, scanned by a computer, quickly okayed and returned.

Kennedy and Houston airports are ready for the new planes. Heathrow is nearly ready. Early next year it will open a $30 million terminal equipped with the high altitude passenger ramps needed to load and unload the jumbos, moving pavements and mammoth hangars (747s are 40 feet wider and 80 feet long than 707s).

But already Heathrow is not enough. The 2,000 m.p.h. Concorde will be in operation in two years. The 800-passenger Lockheed Galaxy may be ready then, too. Boeing also is talking of 1,000 seaters, powered by nuclear reactors.

At present only the French have the facilities for coping with all this. They began work 10 years ago on a third airport at Paris, capable of handling 150 planes an hour, 180,000 passengers a day. Already they are working on a fourth airport, designed for the 1980s.

The French want Paris to replace London as the world's most important international air terminal. Britain is helping to oblige.

The Roskill Commission is investigating possible sites for a new airport. Foulness, a sparsely populated wasteland at the mouth of the Thames, is thought likely to be named when the commission makes a decision at the end of the year. Homes will have to be provided for 250,000 people at the ariport complex by the 1980s. High-speed road and rails links will run the 50 miles from London.

But such is the speed of aviation development that sluggish Britain, now 10 years behind France, could be 20 years behind when it has Foulness.

Airline companies will land their jumbos as often as possible where they get the best service.

By 1980, the countries which haven't kept up will lose billions of tourist dollars.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Diet Plays An Influential Role In Care And Upkeep Of Teeth

VAN DELLEN

Cavaties develop when bacterial enzymes in the saliva ferment carbohydrates in the diet. The resulting acid eats into the enamel and a cavity is in the making. It is not this simple because some people are blessed with fewer bacterial enzymes or harder enamel and are considered more cavity resistant.

The best defense against cavities is the avoidance of sweet, sticky foods and adequate fluorides at an early age to increase resistance of the enamel. It is important to differentiate between nutrition and diet.

DIETARY SUGARS are important in relation to tooth decay. If these sugars (especially sucrose) do not come into contact with the teeth, they do not stimulate caries. No specific foods will prevent caries although there is some evidence that fat, cocoa, cheese, bone meal and unrefined cereals may protect against cavities. Certain phosphates, molybdenum, and vanadium might prove helpful along this line.

Before the teeth erupt, nutrients are important in dental development. Calcium and vitamin D are essential but there is no need for concern so long as the infant receives a nourishing diet.

THE GUMS, connective tissue, and bony socket are less likely to be influenced by any particular food. These tissues are damaged more by local irritation including infection, calculus, plaques upon the teeth, traumatic occlusion and overhanging margins of restorations. Periodontitis is more likely to occur in older people and is the most common cause of loss of teeth. No particular foods strengthen the tissues except a well-balanced diet. A recent Vietnamese study revealed a higher incidence of periodontal disease among villagers whose typical diet was low in total calriodes, protein, carbohydrates, riboflavin, and iron.

(Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the Independent-Journal.)

CHILDREN'S TRIPS

Mrs. E. T. writes: We are taking an extended auto trip this month and it will be up to me to see that our children don't get too tired or develop intestinal upsets. Have you any suggestions along this line?

REPLY

Yes we do, and you can find them in our leaflet, traveling with children. It can be obtained by sending a stamp, self-addressed envelope with request.

SCHIZOPHRENIA

M. M. writes: Could schizophrenia occur for the first time in old age?

REPLY

Yes, as a form of senile psychosis. This type of insanity is more common in early adult life which is why it formerly was called dementia praecox. The name was changed after it was found that the disease may occur at any age from 3 to 93.

PAINFUL HOUSEWORK

A. R. writes: At age 48, I find household chores too painful to do, especially when kneeling and bending are required. What causes pain in the muscles and stiffness in the joints?

REPLY

Arthritis and muscular rheumatism. You need help if the distress is severe. Heat, massage, and pain relieving drugs may solve your problem.

SUN AND STROKE

D. D. writes: Could too much sun bring on a stroke?

REPLY

Yes, especially in older persons with high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries (arteriosclerosis).

Today's Health Hint — Pinworms and nervousness are two possible causes of anal itch.

Rainy Weather Driving Report

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI)—Drivers who dread rainy days are still back in the model-T era, according to Texas highway officials.

Driving in wet weather requires extra caution, but is welcomed by professional drivers as a break in the monotony of traffic-jammed highways, a report in the Texas Highway Department magazine said.

Improvements in roads, cars and tires make driving in wet weather safe for those who follow necessary precautions, the article said, but it urged motorists to drive as if they had no brakes during rainy weather.

Moderate Exercise Is Good For The Elderly

OSLO, Norway (UPI)—A study by a gerentology institute in Oslo shows moderate excercise was in no way injurious to the health of senior citizens.

The investigators said the participants, aged 70 to 81, had a feeling of well-being and relaxation was result of the exercise. Because of reduced mobility of joints, walking seemed better than bicycling.

Busy Corner Of Cars, Students, Creek Workers

Stretching like a great leg from Highway 101 on the east to Point Reyes Station on the west is Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, one of Marin's main arteries. The roadway, which carries 18,000 cars a day, has many junctions but few more busy than Kentfield Corners. Here, during regular school session, there are 5,300 College of Marin students, attending day and night classes. Workmen from the Elmer J. Feethy Co. are working hastily to complete Phase II of the Corte Madera Creek flood control project by the end of November. The college sprawls (upper left) around a quadrangle with Harlem Hall, due to be demolished to make way for a new building in mid-October standing behind the service station at the corners. Behind Harlan Hall is the Fine Arts Building and the student center is at left. Next to the center, bordered by trees, is the controversial Corte Madera Creek Project where students had a sleep-in last spring in an attempt to stop flood control work. The creek is dry in this section, its water being diverted so workmen can install the Army Corps of Engineers concrete ditch. It winds past Adaline E. Kent School's grassy playfield at lower left, the scene of a people vs. bulldozer demonstration in April. Houses cluster about the Kentfield hills and in Ross Valley while Ross General Hospital can be seen at upper right near Sir Francis Drake Boulevard. The new Kentfield Fire Station, covered with stones from Mexico, faces College Avenue at the intersection.

Today is Saturday, Aug. 30, the 242nd day of 1969 with 123 to follow.

The moon is between its full phase and last quarter. The morning stars are Venus and Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history

In 1780 Benedict Arnold promised the British he would surrender the American fort at West Point.

In 1932 Hermann Goering, often referred to as No. 2 Nazi, was elected president of the German Reichstag.

In 1965 Casey Stengel stepped out of baseball after a career of more than four decades when he retired as manager of the New York Mets.

Police Destroy Sculpture Art

ROVANIEMI, Finland (UPI)—Angry artists are planning to sue the police chief of this polar town for damaging a piece of "sculpture" they had erected.

The police chief ripped off allegedly pornographic pictures from Swedish magazines that had been attached to the sculpture, made of a shovel, an axe, leather mittens and brushes stuck in the sand.

"Immoral," claimed the police chief.

Avoid Guess Work By Learning To Count On Any Bidding Level

Every reader of this column can easily see which defender has the queen of diamonds. If you were playing the hand at six hearts, however, you wouldn't be able to peek at the East-West cards (I hope), and your slam contract would depend on a guess. Once you learn the secrets of counting, you don't have to guess or peek.

DUMMY TRICK

When today's hand was played, West led the three of clubs, and dummy's ace won. Declarer naturally tried the trump finesse, losing to the king.

Back came the deuce of clubs, and declarer had to ruff. But now declarer knew that West had started with five clubs since she had led her fourth-best club and had then continued with a still lower club.

Declarer got to dummy with a trump to ruff dummy's last club, cashed the top spades and ruffed a spade. West discarded a club on the third spade.

RECONSTRUCTS HAND

West could follow to only two spades and two hearts. That accounted for four of his original 13 cards. West had also started with five clubs. This brought the count up to nine of his original 13 cards. The other four cards had to be diamonds.

EAST'S HAND

Since only five diamonds were missing, East could have only one. Therefore, declarer began that suit by taking the ace, removing the singleton diamond from the East hand. He could then lead the jack of diamonds for a finesse through West to make his slam contract with absolute certainty.

Avoid opening a very weak major suit. When you have no truly biddable suit and the hand is too weak for an opening bid of one no-trump, bid a three-card minor suit.

Bounty Offered For Captured Poachers

OULU, Finaland (UPI)—The hunters are hunting the geese and police are hunting the hunters.

The Oulu area is a favorite resting spot for migrating geese and hunting them is forbidden in spring and summer. However, poachers are plentiful and officials are cracking down to avoid a repetition of last year, when several hundred geese were illegally killed. The local game association is offering 100 marks ($24) reward for every poacher bagged.

Junior Achievement Needs Room For Its Operations

As the Junior Achievement program goes into its fourth year in Marin, it is having problems.

Marin's JA program is administered from San Francisco area headquarters, as is San Mateo County's program.

San Francisco area headquarters has sufficient funds in sight to run its programs at present levels of development for the current year.

Junior Achievement formerly was housed in the former PG&E warehouse at Second and Brooks streets in San Rafael. San Rafael Recreation Center, located in the same building, has grown to the point where it now utilizes all the space, leaving none for JA.

Last year, JA found space in the Labor Temple, but that is not available this year.

Initially in Marin, JA began operations in a public school all-purpose room. It didn't work out well for either the school or JA; there just was not enough storage space to get JA materials out of the way for full school daytime use of the area.

Charles E. Neal of San Rafael, the former vice president and general manager of Northwestern Pacific Railroad and currently a Southern Pacific executive in San Francisco, is among those attempting to find adequate space for Junior Achievement operations in Marin.

Charlie Neal is a man of firm determination. When he has made up his mind to find a place in Marin for JA, he'll find one. JA need have no worry on that point.

Current president of San Francisco Area Junior Achievement is Denman K. McNear, Southern Pacific vice president who makes his home in Mill Valley.

It is easy to understand how Junior Achievement in Marin may in a year or two have its own permanent home in a retired, remodeled railroad passenger car, or two.

But finding a place to locate the cars and readying them for use is too much of a project to be completed in time for the year's activities about to begin.

Anybody with a bright idea for housing JA here this year or for a place to situate its possible future more permanent home is going to get a warm welcome from Denman McNear and Charlie Neal.

Today among career intentions, business appeals to only a small minority.

The purpose of Junior Achievement is to provide young people of high school age with opportunities to get first hand experience with business — how it is organized, how it is financed, how it produces a product or service, how it markets its product, and how it distributes its profits (or makes up its losses).

Last year four production companies of youngsters were organized in Marin. This year, Executive Director Roy Twyman indicates, six companies are planned with the possibility of more if adequate space and volunteer advisers can be obtained.

Thus far in Marin, Junior Achievement has given more than 400 youngsters the opportunity to see first hand how business operates. And their view of business is not limited to that of spectators; they actually participate.

Denman McNear summed up what JA is all about when he wrote recently:

"Despite concern for unrest here at home and fear of our involvements overseas, most of the youth of this country are seeking opportunities to understand and improve the American way. They want to extend the benefits of the free enterprise system, which in one generation has contributed more to advances in medicine, science, communication and culture, and has built more schools, colleges, hospitals and libraries than all previous generations combined. . . .

"Under the guidance of volunteer counselors, these leaders of tomorrow learn (to) recognize the necessity for a sound economy for the security of our country and for providing better and more equal opportunities to the less fortunate, the ill and the aged."

May Junior Achievement find a proper home in Marin and may it grow and expand in the years ahead! Our country needs it.

Unfair Draft, Unfair Director

President Richard M. Nixon has spoken out repeatedly about inequities in the present draft system. He has sent Congress a message urging its revision.

Strangely, however, the President appears to be backing the very man most responsible for how the system operates: Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, who was 75 years old last September and should have been retired under Selective Service rules.

Henry J. Gwiazda, chairman of the Selective Service Appeals Board, has charged that Hershey took over control of the board's personnel, in violation of law and Selective Service rules.

When Gwiazda and fellow board member Kenneth W. Clement made this charge, however, the White House response was to ask for their resignations.

The President, who says the draft is unfair, has thereby blocked appeals by those who share his belief that it is unfair.

General Hershey has repeatedly held himself above the law, has advocated using the draft as a form of punishment, and has blocked efforts to make it work more equitably.

Strange that President Nixon, who recognizes the faults in the draft, does nothing about the man most responsible!

Military Training Strange For Church

"ROTC at the Academy" in Marin Magazine offers occasion for comment. Having been a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church most of my life, I was aware that a disproportionate number of the clergy were "hawks." And I remember when Grace Cathedral in San Francisco was used by military color guards, but not open for use by a peace group for its services. How can a Christian church, Anglican or any other, justify the continuance of military training under its auspices? I can find no support for this historically in the scriptures. To the controrary, early Christians were persecuted for their refusal to take up arms.

It is disconcerting to see the militarization of our youth at any age, but when one sees the church involved with the military training of junior and senior high school student it is obscene.

Outreaching GOP Not Outraged

Thank you for your coverage (I-J. Aug. 27) of the August meeting of the Marin County Republican Central Committee.

We are especially pleased that you described our new fund-raising program which is designed to broaden the base of Republican support, and to bring into the fold more people who have $1, $2 or more dollars to give to the support of our party's activities in Marin.

Getting to the point — the name of this program is "Operation Outreach" not "Operation Outrage" as was reported.

LINES ON LIVING

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

It wasn't hurricane Camille that swept the tiny White Lake, N.Y., community in the Catskills. It was rather a conscious tidal wave of youthful humanity, 450,000 strong, descending on a mid-summer weekend to form what was described as "the largest, freakiest and most apocalyptic be-in in the history of the rock and psychedelic movement."

When it was all over, it might well have fit the description of a disaster area. But this time Camille wasn't to blame. There was, in fact, hardly anyone picking a culprit. It was looked upon, in the words of the New York Times, as "essentially a phenomenon of innocence." The chief of police at Monticello even saluted the participating youths as "the most courteous, considerate and well-behaved group of kids."

BUT THERE WERE a few "buts" of reservation to the general adulation of this innocent youthful enthusiasm. They were courteous and cooperative with the police, but there were no arrests made for the open mass sale of drugs and indecent exposure and posturing; they were freely grooving in the tranquility of a toxic acid air (LSD), where "you could get stoned just sitting there breathing"; they were nice kids, hardly given to protest and trouble, but they were beyond the law and nothing in their vicintty was beyond their reach. (Neighboring farmers fields were used as latrine spots, corn was picked, fences were broken and cows milked by these nice kids.)

No, this was no demonstration of innocence, neither was it a parade of evil-doers in the ordinary sense of the word. It was neither Sodom nor Disneyland. It was simply a pathetic scene of the poverty of spirit and loneliness that is prevalent in our society. For those are our children. And the child is father of the man, reflecting upon the future generation; but he is also child of the father, reflecting upon the present generation.

HAS THE BLACK prophecy of Jeremiah's gloom now come upon us to afflict our children with the visitation committed by fathers' unspirituality? The ancient prophet, stern and unremitting, may shock contemporary parents with thecrushing weight of his words: "The fathers have eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge."

The tribal society of the bearded and beaded, of the unisex cult of love-in, is a pathetic sight of human loneliness and escape, of misadventure, mislove and miserable togetherness made tolerable by drugs and youthful stamina. For in spite of their singing, they are a sad folk, in need of chemical transfusions; in spite of their going places, they always remain standing in the same place, wrapped in themselves; in spite of their crowded ritual togetherness, they are the loneliest at heart, empty in soul. They are indeed a pathetic creed whose most offensive acts are against themselves, in their self-mutilation and in the tendencies they harbor for self-waste and destruction.

Among the sea of debris left over on that soggy 600-acre cow pasture in White Lake is this startling myth: that an affluent society that has everything is incontestably secure in the future and a civilization that goes to the moon is clearly assured of glory and survival. This just isn't so. The "scene" at the Catskill mountains demonstrably proves it.

MAN IS AN extreme animal He can soar toward the moon or "dig" in the mud. He is given to moods and modes of agony and ecstacy, of soaring weightless or sinking in quagmire. And the trouble is that he can get used to either and live — but never by bread alone. He will always look for a seat in an arena of sights, of new revelation, of miracle. In White Lake, young people came for just that and found rain, wind and mud-caked rags mingled with electronic music, drugs and tribal togetherness. But they called it valorous, beautiful and glorious. Comrades in acid, rock music and mud found the experience not only endurable but also memorable.

Said one 17-year-old beautiful acid-head who was sitting yoga-style in the mud as her empty-eyed look fell on the mountains of man-made filth in the midst of surrounding majestic natural beauty: "See the mud. It's everywhere. After awhile you don't care. You sit down in it because it's there."

So, you see, the stars are there and the mud is there, and man goes to both because they are there. Where will he be found going in the next generation?

Moynihan Report May Point To New Vietnam Pressure

WASHINGTON — The biggest and most hardy fiction of current times, the non-fact that if only the war in Vietnam were not there billions upon billions would be instantly at hand to cure all our urban ills, has at long last been exploded.

The man who is surely not lacking in interest in urban reform, White House Urban Affairs Asst. Daniel Moynihan, has officially — and with obvious reluctance — reported to President Nixon that even if the war ended tomorrow, all those bags of money simply would not be available for new social programs. The vast "surplus" so long predicted would in fact be eaten up by the rising costs of other programs, not excluding the new defense allocations that would be unavoidable if we allowed ourselves to be defeated in Vietnam, and by rising costs in general and the rising population curve.

THUS IT IS that another argument of the extreme "peace" forces has joined a long list of bankrupt contentions. Sic transit the old alibi that if only we would get out of Vietnam, all could be put aright here at home.

It almost convinces a man that there really is something in the old saying that truth does sometimes rise again, however crushed by mere hope and facile sloganeering.

Yet this formal finding by the Nixon administration that the Big Rock Candy Mountain does not exist is perhaps as important for its timing as for its substance. For it is issued in the wake of the President's decision to halt indefinitely his erstwhile plan for steady troop withdrawals from Vietnam.

IT IS OBVIOUS that this could be used to support what is almost certain now to come. This is a harder line in Vietnam, however it may be described, not because the administration loves "escalation" and all that, but because of another harsh reality that simply cannot be wished away. This is the reality that repeated one-sided American concessions to the Communist enemy have demonstrably only emboldened him to believe that, having already got something, he can at length get it all and force an American capitulation.

It would be going to extremes to predict that the President is now going into Vietnam with all guns blazing. It would be equally foolish, however, not to recognize that a policy of actually largely semantical yielding and yielding has put the President in a box so difficult as to require at least a reappraisal, however agonizing.

OFFICIAL Washington denies that the suspension of troop withdrawal is a major change in principle, and this is entirely understandable. It is particularly so in light of the fact that both Secretary of State William Rogers and Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird had been talking of more and more withdrawals right up to the hour when the President himself said in effect: No more now, anyhow.

For Mr. Nixon's whole approach for many weeks has been grounded upon an earnest and indeed almost desperate attempt somehow and to some extent to placate the new isolationist doves of the Senate and to get at least some of their pressure off his back.

THE TROUBLE, however, is that even though Mr. Nixon's yielding and yielding was in truth more symbolical than real, since he never intended to open any possibility of genuine retreat, it was not seen in that way by either the Communist enemy or the doves of the Senate.

The former saw it as evidence of weakened American will and have acted accordingly. The doves chose to see it as a flat promise of early American retirement.

Industry's Answer To Inflation: Put Nothing In The Package

WASHINGTON — The wonderful thing about American industry is that it rises to every challenge. Even something as distasteful as inflation has not discouraged most manufacturers.

Their solution to the problem is not in the product but in the package. Rather than raise the prices on many goods, American industry is devising new methods to make the product smaller, while making the package larger. In this way, the customer feels assured that nothing has changed.

I VISITED one of the largest packaging companies in the country the other day to see how they were doing it. The vice president in charge of inflationary design took me around the plant.

"We're going 24 hours a day," he said proudly. "Everyone is asking us for new designs to help them get through this rough period."

I noticed women in white smocks working with tweezers under microscopes.

"What are those women doing?" I asked.

"Those are 5-cent chocolate bars on their tweezers. They put each one in that large aluminum foil and then they wrap wax paper around it. Over the wax paper they put the name of the chocolate bar in large letters. Here's one that's finished."

"Why, from the outside it looks like an old-fashioned chocolate bar!"

"No one can tell the difference until they open the package," he said proudly.

WE WENT into another part of the building. There were air hoses hanging all over the ceiling and boxes were rolling along a conveyor belt.

I looked perplexed.

"We're packaging soap flakes in here," he shouted above the din. "The lady down at the beginning of the line puts one teaspoonful of soap flakes into those giant-sized boxes; then those men over there with the hoses pump air into the rest of the box."

"How ingenious!" I shouted back.

"The bottom of the box is weighted with very heavy cardboard so no one will know, when picking up the box, how much soap flakes there are in it."

"THAT'S A LOT of air to put in a box."

"We don't use the air for only soap flakes. We also use it for cereals, baking products and anything that comes in a box.

"Let me show you this invention which we have a patent on. This is a see-through wax paper window for noodles. Well, when you look at it you think you're getting a full box of noodles. Right?"

"Of course."

"Now look at the inside of the box."

"Why, the only noodles in it are stuck to the window," I said in amazement.

"Yup. The windows and the noodles are magnetized. When the window fills up with noodles, the box moves on."

"ARE THOSE frozen TV dinners over there?"

"They certainly are. They look like a complete dinner, don't they?"

"You bet."

"Now look under the tray. You see how it's indented. There's nothing in the tray but what you see on the top."

"Fantastic!" I said.

HE TOOK ME into another building which had a large sign, "Pharmaceuticals," on the outside. "This is where we work on new packaging for medicines." He opened a door and everywhere I looked were large mounds of white cotton.

"What do you do with that stuff?" I asked.

"We put two pills in each bottle of medicine and stuff the rest of it with white cotton. If it wasn't for cotton I don't think the drug industry could survive."

"You people think of everything."

"Not everything. Our dream is to devise a package filled with nothing but air, cotton and aluminum foil. If you bought one, you'd get a second package free."

Major Medical Training Role For Androids

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1971-model androids are coming off the drawing boards.

One is a dentist-training robot that can bleed, say "ouch" and jerk its head when the drill hits a "nerve."

Another, far more sophisticated, will be subjected in the name of medical science to just about every kind of indignity doctors can tell nurses to perpetrate.

The androids—computerized automatons fashioned in human form—are the latest in a series of life-size simulators designd to speed the training of physicians, dentists and nurses and at the same time eliminate the possibility of harm to human patients during the learning process.

BRAIN CHILDREN

They are the brainchildren of bioengineer Don F. Carter, one of the creators of Sim One, a $275,000 simulator used experimentally since 1967 to train anesthesiologists at the University of Southern California.

Sim One, a 6-foot-2, 195-pound robot with plastic flesh and aluminum bones, gives human-like reactions to anesthetic gases and to intubation, a delicate procedure which can damage living tissue if improperly performed.

Carter's dentist-trainer, being made at similar cost for the U.S. Public Health Service, will have replaceable teeth that can be drilled and filled, a tongue to get in the way of instruments, and gums that will swell if injected improperly.

He'll bleed if cut. Saliva will gather in his mouth and have to be sucked away by an aspirator. His breath will fog the student-dentist's mirror.

By COMPUTER

All these real-life situations are programmed into a computer and can be called into play by an instructor.

Carter says the dental simulator will be finished in about 18 months. He expects hundreds of them eventually will be in use in dental schools over the country.

Another Carter project is a whole-body simulator designed for training nurses. With it they'll be able to practice taking pulse, temperature and blood pressure; give injections and take blood samples; catheterize bladder and heart; record heartbeats and brain waves; administer oxygen, even stick tubes into the throat and bowels through incisions.

Incorporating techniques perfected in earlier robots, the nurse-trainer will have a network of liquid-filled plastic tubes to simulate blood vessels, a pneumatic system to provide a pulse, and hundreds of tiny pressure transducers to generate electronic signals which will make it move as if in pain.

CRASH DUMMIES

Carter, now working for the U.S. Public Health Service, got started in human simulation through designing auto and plane crash dummies.

"These are not dummies," Carter says of his androids. "They're smarties. They're better than human patients in many respects. The student can go over and over a procedure until he learns it—which you can't do with human patients. The robot gives you an immediate reaction to treatment even if anesthetized. And he can be programmed to simulate any set of symptoms—the student doesn't have to wait for the right patient to come along so he can practice treating a disease."

Marinite Pleads Guilty To Armed Robbery Of Market

I-J Special Report

SAN LUIS OBISPO — A 34-year-old man who said he lived in San Rafael has pleaded guilty to a charge of armed robbery of a San Luis Obispo County food market on June 28.

Billy Ray Jackson, who gave an address on Stevens Place, had pleaded innocent to the charge and the case went to trial Tuesday.

A jury was selected, opening statements given and testimony begun when Jackson's attorney moved for a mistrial on the grounds that the judge, Richard F. Harris, had once represented Jackson.

The motion was granted and a new trial scheduled for the following day by Judge Timothy I. O'Reilly, also of the San Luis Obispo County Superior Court.

As that trial opened, Jackson changed his plea and the case was continued to Sept. 15 for sentencing.

Earlier, Jackson's companion, Jerome William Jenks, 36, who said he lived on De Luca Place, San Rafael, pleaded guilty to armed robbery and was sentenced to a state prison term.

$1,700 Diamond Ring Is Taken

Ramona Stallings of 4 Manderly Road, San Rafael, has reported to police that a $1,700 diamond ring was taken from her bedroom sometime in January when she was out of town.

The only person who had access to the house was a maid, police said, but she has not been questioned.

No explanation was given of the wait between the presumed time of theft and the report to police.

Black Day At Black Rock For U.S. Davis Cup Hopes

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Donald Dell, the young Washington D.C., attorney who captains the U.S. Davis Cup team, sounds more like a mathematician as he assesses the latest blows to American hopes of keeping the silver tennis trophy.

"We suffered three serious setbacks, the most serious being Clark Graebner's injury," the dapper former Yale man said today. "You might call Friday a Black Day at Black Rock for us.

"I think a minus here may prove a plus at Cleveland next month. It may be a blessing in disguise. There is no chance now that our team will go to Cleveland complacent, relaxed and overconfident."

Graebner, who with Arthur Ashe Jr., shared one of the singles spots in winning back the Cup from Australia last December, sprained his right ankle in a second round match yesterday against Roger Taylor of England and had to default in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

There was some question that Graebner would be ready for the Challenge Round match against Romania at Cleveland Sept. 19-21.

Graebner, however, said he "hoped to be able to play in about seven days. The doctor told me the injury was not serious."

Graebner's spill only compounded the misfortune that beset the Yanks during the third day of play in the $137,000 tournament.

Stan Smith of Pasadena, new national champion and rated by many as the new hope of American tennis, lost a center court battle to Romania's No. 1 player, Ilie Nastase, 5-7, 12-10, 7-5, 6-3.

On an outside court, Charlie Pasarell of Puerto Rico, a member of the six-man U.S. squad and a singles possibility, bowed to a little-known Australian, Terry Addison, 6-3, 9-7, 6-4.

The straight-set defeat may have knocked the flashy Puerto Rican out of Cup consideration, increasing the stature of Cliff Richey, the intent and determined little Texan.

"Everybody's been saying what a breeze we're going to have at Cleveland," Dell said. "I've said we're in for a tough match. This proves it."

The Romanian team consists of Nastase, a dark-haired army lieutenant of 23 with speedy reflexes and a fiery fighting spirit, and Ian Tiriac, 26, a shaggy teacher. They upset Britain at Wimbledon to gain the challenge round.

"I played against Tiriac at Bucharest in the World Student games," Dell said. "He is very good, but better on clay. Nastase likes the faster surface. Both are well-conditioned and very tough."

The Cleveland surface is an asphalt base, faster than grass.

The current Davis Cup squad consists of Ashe, Graebner, Smith, Pasarell, Bobby Lutz and Cliff Richey. Dell must cut to four men by Sept. 9 with a chance of making a substitute five days before the matches.

"It's now a whole new ball game," the captain said. "I have no idea what four I will name. A lot will depend on the doctor's report on Graebner."

Popular old Pancho Gonzales and such seeded favorites as John Newcombe, Tony Roche, Marty Riessen, Fred Stolle and Andres Gimeno advanced into the third round yesterday, along with the leading women contenders headed by Australia's Margaret Court and Billie Jean King of Long Beach.

The top half of the draw in both men's and women's divisions were scheduled today. Favored Rod Daver of Australia, seeking his second Grand Slam, apparently had an easy match against Jaime Fillol of Chile. Ashe faced his former Davis Cup teammate, Jim Osborne of Honolulu.

Mrs. King, who contends she is playing only about 65 per cent of her top form, faced Denise Carter of Los Altos. In other women's matches, Nancy Richey of San Angelo, Tex., met England's Winnie Shaw; Peaches Bartkowicz of Hamtramck, Mich., opposed France's Francoise Durr, and Rosemary Casals of San Francisco played Peggy Michel of Pacific Palisades, Calif.

KNARRY A CLOUD IN THE SKY

A Bay Area skipper takes to the water in his Knarr sailboat on a tranquil day. There will be all kinds of Knarrs on the water when the San Francisco Yacht Club (of Belvedere) celebrates its Centennial starting today with a week-long International Knarr Class championship regatta in addition to competition in two International One Design boats and Folkboats. Ten Bay Area skippers and five skippers from the Royal Danish Yacht Club in Copenhagen will compete for top honors in the Knarr division. (Diane Beeston photograph)

Raiders Are Favored; 49ers Corral McNeil

Cross-Bay Foes Clash In Oakland

The San Francisco 49ers finally had holdout receiver Clifton McNeil under contract today but still found themselves on the short end of the odds for tomorrow's big cross-bay rivalry with the Oakland Raiders.

McNeil, the National Football League champion pass catcher in 1968 after coming to San Francisco from Cleveland in a trade, agreed to terms yesterday but will not be ready to play tomorrow when the rivals clash before a sellout crowd of 53,000 at the Oakland Coliseum, 1 p.m. Last year McNeil pulled in 71 aerials for 994 yards and 7 touchdowns for which he was paid $22,500. He was holding out for $60,000 this year while the 49ers reportedly were offering $40,000. Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

49ERS WINLESS

The Raiders are favored by 2½ points but the 49ers are anxious to win not only because of the intense rivalry but also because of their winless record in three previous exhibition games. The Raiders, 1-3 on the pre-season schedule, have split the two previous encounters with the 49ers, losing 13-10 in 1967 and winning 26-19 last year.

Both teams are expected to go mostly with regulars since the regular season is only a few weeks away. For the Raiders, in fact, this is the last exhibition, although the 49ers still have two left.

Oakland Coach John Madden has said Daryle Lamonica will go most of the way at quarterback, while San Francisco's Dick Nolan is expected to go with John Brodie for the better part of the contest.

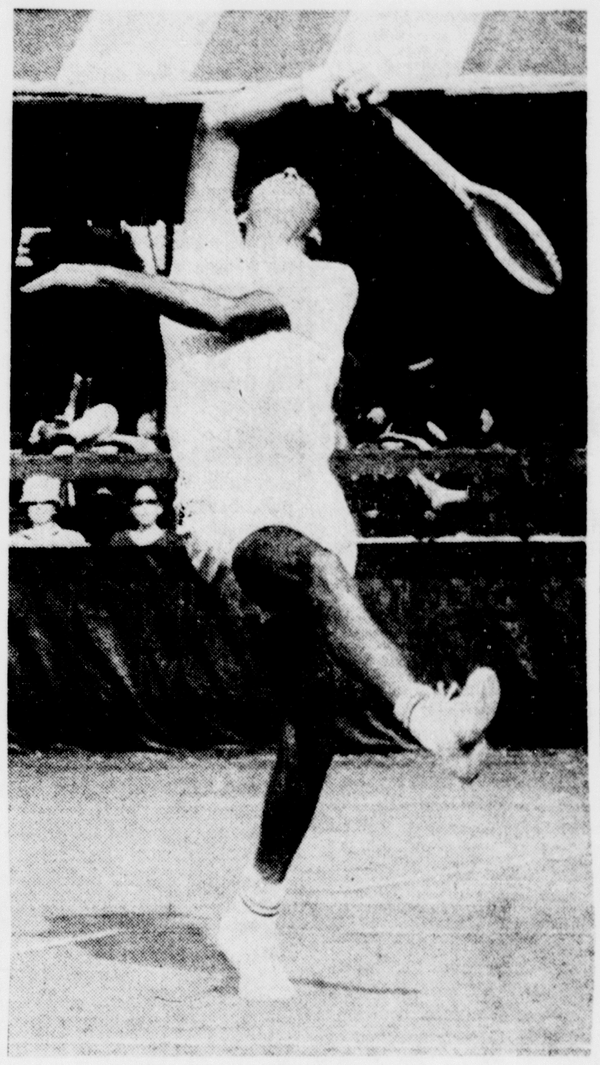
DIXON OUT

Both teams will be slowed somewhat by injuries. Hewitt Dixon, the Raiders' powerful running back, is out with a knee injury and Pete Baaszak will take over.

The 49ers will be missing defensive end Stan Hindman, who suffered a shoulder dislocation in an earlier game. Kevin Hardy will start in his place.

Gene Moore, rookie running back from Occidental, will start in place of Bill Tucker, who suffered a knee injury last week against Denver.

Gene Washington, Stanford's promising wide receiver, may also get a starting call. In three pre-season games, Washington leads the team's receivers with 13 catches for 198 yards.



THE AGILE OLD PRO

Pancho Gonzalez, long-time tennis champ, still showed a lot of agility returning this shot en route to 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 3-6, 6-4 victory over Australia's Ray Ruffels in U.S. Open Tennis Championships in New York yesterday. (UPI telephoto)

Golf Has A Sore Hip And Lump In Throat

There are as many ways to live life as to play a golf course.

Most guys prefer to behave as if they were shaving a sleeping lion. They just hope to par in before he wakes up.

Others, like Ben Hogan, preferred to fetter it — to engineer their way around so that it didn't matter if the lion awoke or not. Hogan didn't care whether it woke up or not. It would be helpless.

Arnold Palmer just tried to eviscerate it. He rolled up his sleeves, wound up and threw a crazy right. He tried to dismember it, yank its hat down over its ears, kick it in the behind and drag it home with him to pin on the wall.

He was either in the water or in the hole. He either took a 2 or a 12. He was never on the same side of the hole as his first putt. He waded in throwing his Sunday punch.

No one ever compared his swing to syrup on waffles or butter on lobster. There was effort in the Palmer swing. He finished up like a Roman candle. Sparks came off his putts. If they didn't hit the hole, they hit spectators.

Like Cobb Going Into Second

Arnold Palmer played golf as if he were fighting a lion. It was him or it. It was Dempsey tearing into Firpo, Jim Brown hitting a line, Ty Cobb going into second. He never hit a timid shot in his life. They didn't make the golf hole that could scare Palmer. He could par 42nd Street if he made up his mind to it. He was one of the strongest men ever to pick up a 9-iron.

Other players had fans. Arnold had an Army. For him, they would have tried to take Moscow, stormed the Siegfried Line. Guys chartered airplanes to tow "Go, Arnie, Go!" banners when their hero teed it up.

Arnold leaving golf is like a 2,000-year-old redwood toppling. It is Napoleon going to Elba, Caesar falling, Rome declining. After him, the Dark Ages.

Great golfers are like great Presidents, great leaders anywhere. You are entitled to one a generation. It is a game which does not respond to mediocrity. It is like a dog which smells fear and is infuriated by it.

New Arnie In Faceless Mass?

Maybe there's a Palmer out there in that faceless mass of youngsters. Maybe Raymond Floyd will go out to win four Masters, two British, one Open and be in three other playoffs.

Maybe.

But golf today is in Latrobe, Pa., with a sore hip.

Armando Claudio of San Jose won the division with a 310 score. Dale Hayes of South Africa won the 15-17 age group for boys; Jane Renner of San Diego took the girls' 15-17 title and Lora Baugh of Long Beach won the girls' 13-14 crown.

Barry Rejoins Warriors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rick Barry, the only man ever to lead both the National and American basketball leagues in scoring, average, may be going to court again to determine who gets his services.

Barry, San Francisco Warrior owner Franklin Mieuli and Barry's attorney announced yesterday that the 6-foot-7 forward had agreed to a five-year contract with the NBA Warriors, the team that drafted him in 1965.

Dressed in tan, striped, bellbottom toursers and white silk shirt, Barry told a news conference he was returning to the Warriors after just one season as part-time player and part owner of the Oakland Oaks.

MOVE EAST

The Oaks were sold recently to Earl Foreman of Washington, D.C., who has said he'll move the ABA team east. Barry reportedly had a contract with the Oaks saying he didn't have to move with the team if it were transferred out of the San Francisco Bay area.

"Based on the fact that the

Giants' Support Surprises Juan

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "I had a feeling we'd score some runs," remarked Giants' right-hander Juan Marichal, "but I didn't expect four in the first inning off a good pitcher."

If Marichal was stunned over the first-inning explosion in last night's 5-0 rout of the New York Mets, it was probably because he pitched 13 scoreless innings at Shea Stadium last week before losing 1-0 on Tommie Agee's 14th-inning homer.

"I had better control in New York," he admitted. "I was getting behind a lot of hitters tonight so I had to pitch differently. I'm glad I had good stuff."

Marichal, 16-9, scattered four singles in notching his sixth shutout of the season and 43rd of his career, tops among active pitchers. The victory was the streaking Giants' ninth straight and snapped the Mets' six-game win string.

Marichal's success against the Mets shouldn't be surprising. He's won 22 of 25 career decisions against New York, including nine shutouts.

"You can't spot a pitcher like Marichal four runs and expect to beat him," grumbled Mets' Manager Gil Hodges, who sent Don Cardwell, 5-9, against Gaylor Perry, 16-10, today. "We just have to bounce back."

Outstanding Prospects For Marin Tars In '69

College of Marin football coach Dick Read gets back into action next week minus his very own football field but with otherwise outstanding prospects.

The Tars will start practice Monday and the first scrimmage is set for Saturday, Sept. 6 against Chabot Junior College at 9 a.m. That's preceded by regular double sessions during the week.

The Tars then go into a tri-scrimmage involving San Joaquin Delta and Diablo Valley on Sept. 10. Both scrimmages are set for College of Marin's slowly developing field which has yet to be rigged with lights and bleachers. That's the main reason the Tars will play all home games at Marin Catholic High School this season.

Read is hoping to greet a nice pack of returning veterans plus what could be a healthy and talented batch of Marin County prep aces, even though their ranks have already been ravaged by four-year schools.

Despite the healthy outlook, Reed is not a man to blow his trumpet too loudly. He can see a cloud just around the corner. In this case, it happens to be the rest of the Camino Norte Conference, with most of the schools looking good. So Read, although he's not singing the blues, isn't assuring another co-championship, which he and his Tars captured in their first Camino Notre season.

Also returning are defensive back Jim Taylor, defensive end Rick Smith, tackle Paul McCarthy and Dan Granucci linebacker Art Langhoff, defensive end Charley Collins, guard Charley Keppel and defensive tackle Jim Pack.

However, the newcomers who seem to be definitely coming out could give everybody a run for their money.

There's Redwood High School quarterback Jim Peters and versatile Redwood back Pete Carroll.

The big news may be that Biber's back and Read's got him. That's Mike Biber, who two years ago blazed up the area with some fine pass-catching at Tamalpais High before going to Oregon State and an unfruitful year at the run-oriented school.

Joining him will be receivers like Pete Weekley of Novato, Ron Small of Tamalpais and Carroll.

From Terra Linda, Read will have fine running back Steve McClain, a top-rate linebacker and back in John Dohn and tackle Carl Hicks.

From Novato, it will be quarterback-running back-receiver Greg Davenport, halfback Pat Greene, and end Jack Straw.

Questionmarks as to whether or not they'll come out are speedster Luther Brown of Tamalpais, fullback Dave Bariski of San Rafael and tackle Don Rodack of Tamalpais.

The only thing missing seems to be a back on the order of Tim Garvin and Tim Harr, who paced the Tars to two different titles. Brown could fill that order if he comes out.

BAD BLOOD

A's, Nats Swap Grudge Pitches

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bad blood boiled between the Oakland Athletics and Washington Senators.

Oakland's rising superstar, Reggie Jackson, claimed yesterday that Washington reliever Darold Knowles hit him on the arm intentionally with a grudge pitch in the ninth inning of a game won 5-0 by the Athletics.

A's reliever Paul Lindblad then hit Senators' pinch-batter Paul Casanova in the back with a pitch in the bottom of the ninth.

Jackson, who leads the major leagues in homers, said Knowles had threatened to get him when the two players traded gibes after Knowles struck out Jackson in their last meeting in Oakland.

IN JEST

Knowles, who maintained the remark was made in jest, said, "You have to come inside occasionally against a man who has hit 45 home runs."

Jim Nash, making his first start since June 15, held the Senators to two hits over the seven scoreless innings he worked.

He picked up his seventh victory in 14 decisions, but admitted he was tiring and welcomed Lindblad's relief help.

The loss went to Barry Moore, 8-7, who relieved Washington starter Jim Hannan in the seventh.

GREEN STARTS IT

In yesterday's game, Dick Green started Oakland on the way to victory with a triple to open the eighth inning and scored on Bob Jackson's pinch single.

Oakland scored again in the eighth when pinch-batter Danny Cater hit a sacrifice fly to drive in Tommy Reynolds, who had walked behind Green and moved to third on Johnson's single.

Three more Athletics' runs were scored in the ninth.

Jackson raced to third when Frank Howard missed a pickoff throw from Knowles. Sal Bando scored Jackson with a single and Green's double and a walk loaded the bases.

Larry Haney's grounder slipped by third baseman Ken McMullen to drive in two more runs.

sive 10th victory. Ex-Met Ron Hunt walked with one out in the first and Bob Burda blooped a single to center. Hunt then stole third.

It was Bonds' 29th homer of the season and seventh in the nine-game streak. He's knocked in 18 runs in that span and McCovey's added 20. Bonds' 102nd run of the season capped the Giants' scoring in the sixth.

"I hit a high slider for the homer," said Bonds, "but I wasn't looking for anything in particular. I was relaxed at the plate because I hit Gentry well last week in New York."

Marichal, now with a 186-86 career record, was particularly careful of Agee and Cleon Jones, the Mets' leading batters.

"Agee hit a screwball for the home run last week so I didn't throw him any this time," said the pitcher. "But Jones is the toughest Mets' batter for me. He had three hits in New York and one more tonight."

The win extended the Giants' Western Division lead to 1½ games over Atlanta and Cincinnati. The Mets dropped 3½ games behind Chicago in the East.

Japan Welter Loses Decision

SAN JOSE (AP) — Kid Rayo, a Nicaraguan fighting out of Los Angeles, spoiled the U.S. debut of Japanese welterweight champion Ryu Sohrimachi last night by taking a close 10-round decision.

Rayo, a pre-fight underdog, was given a 4-3 edge, with three rounds even, by referee Vern Bybee, the only official scoring. Many in the crowd of 1,200 who paid $3,400 thought the nod should have gone to the Japanese fighter.

There were no knockdowns, but Rayo bloodied Sorimachi's nose with left jabs in the fourth round and again in the seventh. Sorimachi was ineffective in the infighting, and Rayo consistently tied him up.

HARTFORD OPEN

Borrowed Clubs Aid Bob Murphy

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI)—Bob Murphy, still looking for his stolen golf clubs, and two other young pros hunting for their first tournament wins, attempted to pull away from the field today in the second round of the $100,000 Greater Hartford Open.

Murphy, the burly Irishman from Gainsville, Fla., used a borrowed putter to score seven birdies yesterday for a 33-33-66 card over the lush course at the Wethersfield Country Club.

SHARE LEAD

Sharing the lead with Murphy were J. C. Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Joel Goldstrand, of Worthington, Minn.

Murphy, who has failed to win a tournament since his victories last year in the Thunderbird and Philadelphia Classics, has earned a comfortable $48,226 in the current tour.

It was in the City of Brotherly Love that some culprits stole Murphy's favorite putter along with his woods and irons.

OTHER 68'S

Also shooting a 68 were Dave Hill, winner of the Memphis Open and the Philadelphia Classic; Gay Brewer, who lost to Hill in a playoff at the Philadelphia Classic; lefty Bob Charles, Randy Wolff, Claude Harmon Jr., and Don Bies.

Dave Stockton, the San Bernardino pro who has earned $56,150 this year, carded a 69 along with Bert Greene and Al Balding.

The field of 143 will play the second round with a cut figure that will trim the field to a little more than half.

Melnyk Well On Way To U.S. Golf Crown

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI)—Steve Melnyk was two-thirds of the way home today in the U.S. Amateur golf championship.

"I'll take three more rounds of 73," said the chunky ex-football player after he grabbed the first-round lead Wednesday with a one-under-par 70.

Melnyk had two of those 73's on the scoreboard as he began the final round and it appeared another 73 would nail down the title for the Brunswick, Ga., native who attends the University of Florida.

His 216 total for 54 holes was three strokes better than Vinny Giles of Lynchburg, Va., and Allen Miller of Pensacola, Fla., who had 72 and 73, respectively, in the third round yesterday.

The third round was marred when several players, including Miller, arrived at the course and discovered their putters, or their entire set of clubs, had been stolen. Miller lost only a putter which he had used two months, replaced it in two minutes at the pro shop, and handled Oakmont Country Club's lightning greens well.

Giles, who was runnerup by a single stroke each of the last two years, said he was discouraged despite a steady third-round 72 in which he had one birdie and two bogeys.

Bill Hynman III of Huntington Valley, Pa., and Jim Masserio of Duquesne, Pa., found that all their clubs were missing and had to use borrowed sets. Hynman shot a 75 for a three-round 226 while Masserio had a 77 for 225 total.

BARRY

Oaks are going back to Washington," Barry said yesterday, "I don't feel compelled to go with them."

Foreman, on the other hand, said this week he felt that buying the Oaks meant he'd be getting Barry. And he reportedly is planning to fight a court battle over Barry's services.

Barry, the handsome all-American from the University of Miami, came to the Warriors in the 1965-66 season and the following campaign led the league in scoring with a 35.6 points per game average.

PART OWNER

In 1967, however, he accepted part ownership--and a spot on the team--with the Oaks of the ABA. A court order forced Barry to sit out a season, before jumping to the other league.

When he made it to the basketball floor, Barry played 35 games before being injured and sitting out the rest of the year. But he averaged 34.9 points per game to lead the league.

"I'm delighted Rick is back and I know the players are, too," said Mieuli.

"I'm happy to be back with the Warriors or I wouldn't have agreed to terms," said Barry.

Athletics Get Seattle Pitcher

COMBINED AP & UPI

OAKLAND — The Athletics have acquired veteran right-handed pitcher Fred Talbot from the Stattle Pilots in a trade for southpaw pitcher Bob Meyer and outfielder Pete Koegel who has hit 19 home runs for Birmingham of the Southern League.

Talbot, formerly of the New York Yankees, has compiled a 5-8 record at Seattle.

NEW YORK — Joe Pepitone of the New York Yankees was fined $500 and suspended indefinitely by the club for leaving Yankee Stadium without permission for the second time this week. The controversial first baseman left the club early Wednesday and again before last night's game.

BOXING

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Miami middleweight Luis Rodriguez has signed a contract for a long-awaited shot at world champion Nino Benvenuti's crown late this year somewhere in Europe, possibly Nov. 29 or Dec.: 6. Rodriguez, who lost the world welterweight crown on a split decision to Emile Griffith in 1964, has never lost to a middleweight.

SAN JOSE — Promoter Augie Demilte has offered world welterweight champion Jose Napoles $50,000 to fight Roberto Amaya of Argentina for the title in either Oakland or San Francisco at the end of October. Amaya, who lives in San Jose, has a record of 23 victories in 24 bouts, including 21 knockouts.

FOOTBALL

BERKELEY — Two experienced receivers were among the missing when California's football team opened its first full day of workouts with 78 players on hand. Bruce Burrows, junior split end from Piedmont, and John Fay, senior wingback from Stockton, did not report leaving the Bears without any wide receivers with game experience. Their absence was not explained.

CASTLEWOOD, Va. — Wayne Reynolds, a 17-year-old junior at Castlewood High School, was killed and nearly a dozen of his teammates were injured when a goal post they were carrying brushed against a high voltage power line.

GENERAL

OAKLAND — Television station KEMO, which televised several Oakland Oaks games last season, was told by Superior Court Judge Lyle E. Cook that it must post a $2 million bond to pursue its suit to keep the American Basketball League team from moving to Washington, D. C. The UHF station filed thel awsuit to prevent expected loss of revenue if the Oaks move.

BASKETBALL

CHICAGO — The Chicago Bulls of the National Basketball Association named Pat Wilson, 29, former promotional manager of the Philadelphia 76ers, as general manager, succeeding Dick Klein.

Golf is under a doctor's care. Golf is reading a book with its foot up on a stool.

A tournament without Palmer is like a marriage without love. Golf has picked up. The rest of the game needs strokes today.

I saw what a British Open without Palmer was. I don't care to see what a National Open, a Masters — a Tucson Open, for heaven's sake will be.

The game should have a lump in its throat today. The game should take up a collection to find the best hip doctor on the face of the earth, then dump it on his desk and tell him, "Say 'when.'" Then when he asks who or what they want him to cure, say "Golf."

SOME TOP PROSPECTS

Sonoma State Grid Opens

Three members of College of Marin's 1968 Camino Norte Conference football co-champions will be on hand to launch Sonoma State's first foray into the college gridiron wars tomorrow when head coach Lloyd Helgeson will greet some 70 candidates with equipment and physicals at the Rohnert Park campus.

The three ex-Tars vying for a spot on the Cossack squad will be 6-1, 225-pound center Trevor Benedict, 5-9, 180-pound linebacker Charles Rada and 6-6, 250-pound tackle Jeff Teather.

Helgeson seems to have done a thorough job of recruiting. He's got a batch of fine material from the state's top junior colleges.

TOP PROSPECTS

Heading the list of top prospects will be Bennie Guerra, an all-conference middle guard from Hartnell Junior College, a finalist in last year's state junior college playoffs.

The running game will be centered around a set of big and fast backs. Bernard Jones, a 220-pounder from Modesto, and Richard Lewandowski, a 200-pounder from Taft, will prime for the fullback job.

Chris Alvarado, a transfer from Santa Rosa J.C. and an outstanding prep at Ukiah High School, will be one of the speedsters along with Hermon Manuel of Vallejo's Hogan High School and Jack Trujillo of San Mateo J.C.

Assisting Helgeson will be UCLA graduate Carl Peterson and last year's Sonoma State basketball coach Bob Donlan.

Chiefs Whip Cards In Bruising Battle

Quarterback Charley Johnson of the St. Louis Cardinals stepped out of character . . . and stepped into a concussion.

Johnson turned defensive tackle for a moment and tried to haul down Jim Kearney, who had picked off one of his passes in the second quarter last night. The play set up a Kansas City touchdown and left Johnson dazed the rest of the game, as the Chiefs trumped the Cards 31-21 in a pro exhibition football.

"All interceptions hurt you, especially when they're in your territory," said Coach Charley Winner of St. Louis. "But this one really hurt because Charley was the one who tackled Kearney and got conked on the head.

"From then on, he was kind of dazed. He said he was okay, but finally took himself out. He said he didn't know what he was calling."

NOT SERIOUS

Johnson's injury appeared not to be serious, however. Winner said he would probably play in the next exhibition game.

More seriously hurt was another Cardinal, Chuck Latourette, who suffered a knee injury while running back a kickoff 29 yards. He was to undergo an operation today.

The bruising contest also resulted in a Kansas City injury when defensive tackle Ed Lothamer, suffered a possible fractured hand. He was at a St. Louis hospital.

Kearney's play was the key. He grabbed a Johnson pass toward John Gilliam and raced it back 18 yards to the Cardinal 13. Wendell Hayes ran for 11 and Mike Garrett punched over from the one to turn a 7-6 St. Louis edge into a 13-7 Chief advantage. The Cards never caught up.

CHIEFS 5-0

Kansas City, only undefeated American Football League team, now is 5-0 in pre-season play. St. Louis, of the National Football League, evened its exhibition record at 2-2.

The Philadelphia Eagles and New York Giants play today's only afternoon game in an NFL clash at Princeton, N.J. Other NFL games tonight include Washington vs. Detroit at Tampa, Fla.; Green Bay at Cleveland; and Atlanta at New Orleans.

In other games tonight, it's Chicago, NFL, vs. Buffalo, AFL, at Cleveland; Los Angeles, NFL, at San Diego, AFL; Baltimore, NFL, at Miami, AFL; Cincinnati, AFL, at Pittsburgh, NFL, and Minnesota, NFL, vs. New York AFL, at Winston-Salem, N.C.

San Francisco, NFL, is at Oakland, AFL, and Denver meets Boston in an AFL game at Jacksonville, Fla., tomorrow.

MARIN BOWLING

Hinkel Hits 822 Mark In Greenbrae Action

Hinkel came through with games of 202, 202, 212, and 206 for a 822 total. He bowls with the Monday Men's Trio.

Lee Stetson and Dan Burke came in with the next best efforts, each rolling 814 series in the Peterson Point League. Lee, who works with Montgomery Ward, topped his series with a 259 game while Burke's best game was a 247. Both average in the 190s.

Penny Tauscher, a bride of three weeks, bowled a fine 749 series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael to top the ladies. She had games of 210 and 214 and she's no newcomer to top scores, having bowled a 700 three-game series last year.

Barbara Tobin in the Hi-Lo's had the top three-game set with a 544 total. Kent Dklugokenski tipped the juniors with a 523 series topped by a 201 game.

The "Four Bees," Joe, Dotty, John and Mary Ann Brusatori, took the Hi-Lo's team championship. High series trophies went to John Brusatori and Faith Hicklin. Wayne Tobin and Sharon Peicich took high game honors.

With most of the leagues ending summer action, the bowlers at Nave Lanes near Ignacio didn't exactly send out the summer with a bang.

Nobody managed to crack 600 among the men, with Chuck Farris' 594 being the best effort. Dick Hudson had a 593, Dennis Chase a 582 and Bill Nave III had a 579, topped by a 246 game.

Paulette Kirschbaum led the ladies with a 546 series. The only distaff 200 game was bowled by Joan Roske who had an even 200.

Standard 2x4 Could Become Little Thinner

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau is counting ballots in an election to see if there is general agreement on slicing a little more wood off each stick of construction lumber.

If the proposal is adopted, the standard 2x4—already not 2x4—will be slightly thinner and a little narrower in the future.

For more than 50 years, a nominal 2x4—both green and kiln dried—has left the mill measuring $1\frac{5}{8}$ inches thick by $3\frac{5}{8}$ inches wide. Green lumber shrinks as it loses moisture content.

The new standard would relate lumber sizes to moisture content so the green timber—initially a little bigger—would be the same size as the dry when it loses equivalent moisture.

A dry 2x4—moisture content 19 per cent or less—would measure $1\frac{1}{2}$ by $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches. A green 2x4 would be planed 1-9/16 by 3 9/16 inches. Larger sizes would maintain the same dimensional differences. A 2x8 would be $1\frac{1}{2}$ by $7\frac{1}{4}$ inches; green 1-9/16 by $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches.

The new standard was recommended by the American Lumber Standards Committee, a government-industry organization. It has the approval of fedal agencies and major organizations in the lumber and home building industries.

One dissenter is the soil pipe industry, contending its pipe would no longer fit in a narrower 2x4 studded wall.

The home builders say the answer is to use 2x6's in plumbing walls at an additional cost of $10 to $12 in an average house.

The overall savings, on the other hand, in the smaller sizes are estimated in the lumber industry at about $166 per house.

The proposed new standard, along with ballots, was mailed this summer to about 5,000 firms and organizations selected as a representative sampling of the industries involved.

A "general concurrence," permitting the secretary of commerce to issue the new standard, requires acceptance by 75 per cent of those voting, with at least 70 per cent approval in each of three groups—producers, distributors, users.

Deadline for receipt of ballots was July 31. The Census Bureau has 60 to 90 days to report the results.

Ward Voting System Will Be Eyed By Council

The possibility of a special election to set up a ward voting system will be reviewed by the Petaluma City Council at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. The usual Monday meeting was changed due to Labor Day.

City Atty. Edouard E. Robert will present an opinion on the legality of the petition for the charter amendment circulated by Donald P. Petro. City Clerk Lillian Nommsen said she has not yet verified the petition signatures. Robert has said the districting plan may violate the one-man, one-vote rule.

The council will also hear an appeal filed by James R. Shauft of the Petaluma Printing Co. of the Aug. 5 planning commission decision to allow John Churchill to operate a printing shop at his home at 49 Wilmington Drive.

An appeal from James Scott will also be heard on the planning commission decision denying his application to rezone 651 Central Avenue to permit apartments.

Amphitheater Plans Before Rec. Panel

The Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission will discuss preliminary plans for a proposed amphitheater and wading pool in Fairfax Park at its 8 p.m. meeting Tuesday.

Computer Privacy Hearing Is Set

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — A new Assembly Committee on Statewide Information Policy will hold a hearing on possible invasions of personal privacy by computers at 10 a.m. on Tuesday in the Capitol.

The chairman of the committee, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, said it will hear testimony from state and local officials responsible for electronic data processing units.

"It is not inconceivable that personal dossiers could be created by centralizing all the information that government has gathered from and about individuals during a lifetime," Bagley said, adding "obviously, certain protections must be considered if this trend continues."

Code Of Dress Appeal Approved

A code ofdress appeal has passed the College of Marin college cabinet it was reported yesterday.

The cabinet did not discuss the code, which was informally agreed to on Aug. 21, but approved the minutes of the Aug. 21 meeting when it was discussed.

"I doubt if there'll be any further vote on it," college publicist Earlene Jones said. She said the action on the minutes constituted passage of the code, which sets up procedures for faculty members and students to work out conflicts over dress. Kimo Campbell, student body president, who drafted the policy, was not available for comment on Thursday's actions.

Unusual Approach To Solving Church's Finances

A recreation district that wants a center for its activities and a church that is in a financial bind hope to solve their problems mutually in Santa Venetia.

The Gallinas Village Community Services District board is negotiating for the purchase of the Santa Venetia Presbyterian Church, which it would use for adult craft classes, teen-age activities and senior citizen meetings during the week, and which the church congregation would use Sundays and occasionally during the week.

The district, which has developed parks in Santa Venetia, now rents the church on a single use basis but wants to buy the building and lease it back to the congregation, according to Mrs. Marguerite F. Clark, district secretary. The price being discussed is $80,000, according to representatives of the church and CSD.

The church decided to sell its 17-year-old building when it found it could not maintain it and its community program at the same time, according to Don J. Sayer, an elder of the church.

Up until 18 months ago the church received $2000 support money from the Synod of the Golden Gate but at that time decided to refuse further aid because "there should be a limit to handouts," says Sayer.

The church thought it could carry its own weight but with the retirement of Rev. Aaron Miller a year ago Rev. Claire M. Croughan, a pastor for seven years in Novato and presently a mechanical engineer at Hamilton Air Force Base, was hired to preach three Sundays a month.

"We're not in any financial trouble," states Sayer, "but the work of the church is serving the people of the community, not maintaining buildings."

The building needs painting, and loose doors and broken windows need to be repaired, he said.

The 150-member congregation also faces two mortgages on the building, a $5,000 bank mortgage which is being paid off and a $15,000 one held by the synod, which has had no money paid on it, according to Sayer.

Whether the church should continue as a body if its building is sold will be determined by the Presbytery of the Redwoods, which includes Marin County, according to a spokesman for the presbytery. It is also the presbytery that is negotiating with the CSD over the sale.

This double use arrangement is not unusual for small Presbyterian churches and many congregations do not own their own buildings, according to Merton Muzzy, property negotiator for the synod.

There is no similar arrangement in Marin County but the St. Andrew Presbyterian Church in Marin City allows the Head Start program and other pre-school programs to be held in its building, which it owns.

The Santa Venetia church has movable seats in the sanctuary and has offices and classrooms. The CSD owns the lot next to the church at 635 Adrian Way and this would be developed as a park, as well as the lot on the other side of the church if the Las Gallinas Sanitary District, its owner, gives its approval.

No changes are presently planned for altering the physical structure of the church but the district would have a master plan for potential use drawn if it is purchased, Mrs. Clark said.

The main point now of the negotiations is whether the CSD wants to incur such a sizable indebtedness, according to Sayer.

Minister's Wife: Tough Vocation

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

There must be a special place in heaven, somewhere between the saints and the cherubim, for the wives of clergymen.

They have one of the most difficult of all human vocations.

Because most of them accept the hardships of their role with quiet fortitude, few people realize how much they have to put up with. Even their own husbands sometimes fail to comprehend the heroic measure of patience and dedication required of a minister's wife.

One is a chronic lack of money. Ministers are the lowest-paid professional group in America, and surveys of their financial status reveal that a large majority are constantly in debt. The husband may worry about this, but it's the wife who has to scrimp on the household budget and make do with last year's dress.

Another cross — the one which many clergy wives find heaviest to bear — is the fact that a pastor's time is not his own. He can rarely plan an evening at home without having it interrupted by a call from someone in trouble or a meeting which he has to attend. "I never see him" is the classic complaint of the clergy wife, and in some cases it's not much of an exaggeration.

A congregation also makes demands — sometimes quite unreasonable and thoughtless demands — on the time of the minister's wife herself. She is expected to show up at all major church functions and at many minor ones involving women, no matter how inconvenient it may be for her to do so.

Still another set of problems arises from the close scrutiny to which the private life of the pastor's family is sometimes subjected by members of the congregation. People who would hesitate to pass nosey judgments on their next-door neighbors seem to feel no qualms about criticizing Mrs. Minister for the way she keeps house or raises her children.

It takes an insider to identify other hardships which may befall the woman who marries a minister.

Rev. Ralph M. Smucker, pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church in West Liberty, Ohio, qualifies an an expert witness on the problems of ministers' wives, since he is married to one. In the current issue of Christianity Today magazine, he lists several reasons why ministers are apt to make lousy husbands.

A minister, he says, "is likely to have a strong, aggressive personality." He's in the spotlight most of the time and is accustomed to receiving a good deal of adulation. He is "deeply committed to his work" and feels that other responsibilities — such as his family — must take second or third place in his priorities."

Some of the problems of ministerial marriages can be worked out only by the pastor and his wife. But many of the more serious difficulties could be eliminated if church congregations were a bit more generous and a bit less demanding.

A CHRIST INSPIRED BIKE ADVENTURE

En route via bicycle from Seattle, Wash., to Washington, D.C., these young men paused recently in Minneapolis, Wis. Their purpose is "to demonstrate the vitality of the Christian life and to provide means of increasing the rider's understanding of Christ in a context of honest masculine adventure by relating rugged physical discipline to spiritual growth." MANY DEMANDS

Guidelines For Interchurch Action

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Merger of major Protestant denominations, on a national level, is years away at best. But local churches need not wait. They can begin now to practice Christian unity at the grass roots.

That, in essence, is the position taken by leaders of nine Protestant bodies who are conducting snails-pace merger negotiations in a forum called The Consultation on Church Union (COCU).

At its recent meeting in Atlanta, Ga., COCU adopted a set of guidelines for interchurch action at the local level.

GUIDELINES

The guidelines suggest ways in which churches of different denominations, serving the same community, may pool their resources or even unite without waiting for their parent bodies to work out all of the details of a national merger.

One suggestion, which should be fairly easy to put into effect, is for two or more neighboring churches to carry out joint programs of study or service. For example, a Methodist church, an Episcopal church and a Presbyterian church could jointly sponsor an inner city mission which no one of them could handle alone.

Another possibility is for two or more churches of different denominations to share a professional staff member—such as a director of religious education—who would serve the needs of both congregations. Or, going one step further, they could jointly support a clergyman engaged in a special kind of ministry—for example, to unchurched young people in the community, or to residents of homes for the aged.

THIRD SUGGESTION

A third suggestion from COCU calls for joint use of building facilities "to eliminate costly duplication." When two churches stand practically cheek by jowl, it seems wasteful for both of them to build specialized facilities, such as parish halls or kitchens, which are used for only an hour or so each week.

In fact, with a will to do so, several churches of different denominations could work out mutually agreeable schedules for sharing an entire plant, including the main auditorium or sanctuary in which Sunday worship services are held. The feasibility of this arrangement has already been demonstrated in the new "model city" of Columbia, Md., and in the ecumenical inner city church jointly sponsored by several denominations in St. Louis, Mo.

TWO ALTERNATIVES

Congregations prepared to go farther toward immediate unity are advised by COCU to consider two alternatives:

1. They could unite their ministries—which means that they would start worshipping together under the same pastor—while maintaining separate membership rolls so that each person in the combined congregation formally would retain his affiliation with his original parent denomination.

2. They could establish a federated church, which would seek dual (or triple, or quadruple) affiliation with the various national denominations involved.

The guidelines, drafted by a committee under the chairmanship of Dr. William P. Thompson, stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Church, emphasize that local interchurch cooperation need not be restricted to the nine denominations now participating in COCU.

SHARING PROGRAM

Plans for sharing program, staff or facilities, the Thompson committee said, could be formulated in such a way as to include neighboring parishes of the Roman Catholic Church or of Eastern Orthodox churches, as well as churches of Protestant denominations not participating in COCU.

These suggestions toss the ball back to local pastors and lay leaders who've been asking why "they" are so slow in working out a merger at the national level. Ecumenical progress now becomes a matter of local initiative, which may be just what is needed to pump new life into the movement.

Baha'i Leader Will Visit Encampment In Geyserville

Members of the Baha'i Faith in Marin County, presently attending summer school sessions at the Baha'i school in Geyserville, are assisting with the preparations for the official visit Sept. 2, 3 and 4 of Hand of the Cause of God, Ali Akbar Furutan from the World Center of the Baha'i Faith in the Holy Land.

An extensive tour of the United States, Canada, Alaska, Hawaii, Japan and India has been arranged for Furutan at the request of the Universal House of Justice international Baha'i administrative body located on Mount Carmel in the Holy Land. "Hands of the Cause of God" are specially selected international representatives and teachers of the Baha'i Faith.

Born in Khurasan, Persia, (now Iran) in 1905, Furutan fled with his family to Russia in 1914 to escape religious persecution. In 1930 he had to leave Russia because of his religious activities on behalf of the Baha'i Faith.

In 1934 Furutan was elected to the first National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Iran and continued to serve on that body for 24 years.

Since his appointment as a Hand of the Cause of God in 1951, Furutan has represented the Baha'i Faith and assisted with activities in Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Europe, Africa and South America.

Campus Pastors Vote To Form Association

KENOSHA, Wis. (LC) — Some 200 campus pastors associated with America's three largest Lutheran church bodies voted here in mid-August to establish an association for persons engaged in that field.

Initially identified as Lutheran Campus Ministers Association, the organization was created on a provisional basis without a constitution. The tasks of developing the constitution was referred to a committee.

The action was taken on the last day of a conference attended by personnel of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod and the National Lutheran Campus Ministry, an agency of the American Lutheran Church and the Lutheran Church in America.

It was the first time that campus pastors from the LC-MS and the NLCM had met jointly at the national level. Convened by the Lutheran Council in the USA, the week-long conference was held at Carthage College.

The document which proposed the creation of the association lauded the long history of campus ministry within the denomination. It then expressed gratitude for the joint LC-MS and NLCM staff conference and added:

"It is our earnest hope that the spirit of common concern ... manifest at this meeting be allowed to grow through subsequent meetings towards an ever more committed and effective Christian ministry on the campuses of our nation."

Although no permanent name was immediately chosen, discussion also included as a possible title "Lutheran Ministers in Higher Education."

In other action, the group instructed its six-man constituting committee to include in its proposal two classes of membership — a voting membership that would encompass full-time campus pastors and a non-voting membership.

Lutheran Youth Set Conference

NEW YORK (UPI)—The fourth Lutheran world student conference will be held July 3-11, 1970, in Sao Lepoldo, Brazil.

About 60 delegates from around the world are scheduled to attend the conference, called World Encounte of Lutheran Youth.

They will meet just days before the Lutheran World Federation Fifth Assembly convenes in Porto Alegre, Brazil, and about half of them are expected to attend that meeting.

Romania Becomes Big Political Trump Card

BUCHAREST (UPI) — Little Romania finds itself in the bizarre position of being sought as a political trump card by three of the world's greatest powers—America, Russia and China.

The Romanians were backed at their Communist Party congress this August by a sly cablegram from Peking praising their "defense of independence," a dig at the Russian enemy so brash that the Soviet delegate walked out while it was read.

CHEER NIXON

Four days before the congress opened the President of the United States was being cheered for the apparent American gesture of support for Romanian independence from Washington's rival, Moscow.

Political observers here doubt any differences of opinion between Russia and Romania could erupt into military action in the near future. The Soviet Union in the past has intervened only when the existence of communism itself was threatened, as in Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia in 1968.

At this time the experts expect Moscow to apply only economic and propaganda pressures plus possible military maneuvers near Romanian borders.

Russian-Romanian arguments do not stem from any apparent danger of this country drifting from communism. Unlike Czechoslovakia, no signs are seen her eof possible opposition parties, a free press, or a sharp swing from Communist economy.

The Romanian drive toward "Communist neutralism" actually began in 1962 over whether all the Communist nations should merge their economies into a division-of-labor setup, which Romania thought would be beneficial mainly to the Soviet Union.

Romania, one of the richest in raw materials of all East European countries, had been far less developed under its prewar monarchy. Nikita Khrushchev, then party leader of the Soviet Union, asked Romania to make sacrifices by toning down its plans to industrialize, so as not to duplicate industries which fluorished in Czechoslovakia and East Germany.

The Romanians refused. The Romanian party in March, 1963, issued a communique declaring economic coordination could only be achieved on the basis of "full equality of rights of the sovereign countries."

This became—and has remained—the core of Romania's argument in the dispute.

It was this economic reason which propelled the Romanians into a foreign policy opposing the Soviet line, eventually becoming more political than economic.

Romania recognized West Germany—a move that Russia had never allowed the East European nations to do—so it could become one of Bucharest's major trading partners.

China in 1963 came out for economic cooperation on grounds of complete equality. So Peking, too, became Romania's friend.

Although Russia and China now have a frontier conflict, Romania steadfastly calls for the two parties to negotiate, and reportedly has refused to allow Russia to involve the Warsaw Pact forces in the Sino-Soviet dispute.

Only Romania of the Warsaw Pact nations failed to break relations with Israel after the 1967 Middle East War and opposed the invasion of Czechoslovakia. Only Romania among Warsaw Pact nations dared to invite the U.S. President for a visit. Only Romania balked at signing the nuclear nonproliferation treaty and defended China at the June Moscow Communist summit.

To Meet Thursday

The Marin County Aviation Commission will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday in the board of supervisors chambers at Civic Center. The meeting date was changed from Tuesday, its regular date, due to the Labor Day holiday weekend.

Committee Formed To Save Creeks

A committee was formed Thursday night to study how to save the creeks of Novato and still have flood control, but the meeting nearly broke up before it was over.

Approximately 140 people attended the meeting at the Novato Community House, many of them from the Corte Madera Creek area.

Supervisor William A Gnoss presided and suggested a nucleus of five persons head a 17-member committee to advise the board of supervisors acting as the flood control district board.

Gnoss suggested one member from the planning commission, one from the Marin County Flood Control Advisory board, one from the city beautification panel, one from the North Marin Federation and one from the Novato Chamber of Commerce.

At that point about 75 per cent of the crowd walked out, most of them having come to hear about flood problems and the threat control might pose for Novato creeks, rather than to sit through the setting up of committees.

Seeing the meeting breaking up, Ernestine Barnwell, who will represent the beautification panel, made a motion which was carried by a small voice vote of the few remaining people, that Gnoss' suggestion be adopted.

Others picked were Brian Mattson, head of the Novato Planning Department; William Mayo of the Marin County Flood Control advisory board, and Arnold Baptiste, president of the North Marin Federation. Gearge Barnwell, president of the Novato Chamber of Commerce will name the chamber representative.

Gnoss set 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Bank of Marin for the first meeting of the committee.

Getting The Kids Safely To School

Bus Drivers, State Patrol Share Big Responsibility

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Lena Blaski, one of 20 women bus drivers for the Novato School District, believes that her strict disciplinarian approach pays off in keeping order on a bus full of children.

She enjoys working with youngsters, she said, but if there is funny business, the student may well have to find another way of getting to school.

The same philosophy seems to work for Manuel Silva, Mill Valley School District bus driver on the long and serpentine Mountain Home run.

"I'M CALLED the mean bus driver," said Silva. "I'm very stern because kids get hurt in a bus and this is something I don't want. . . . I'm a little tough with them. They have to obey. I don't allow them to get up, stand on the seats or stick their arms out of the windows."

Mechanics are tuning up Marin County's 130 large coaches and many mini-buses these summer days to prepare for the opening of school.

In the public school system, Reed, Laguna and Shoreline School District pupils return Tuesday; Dixie and San Rafael, Thursday; Ross, Novato, Tamalpais, Lincoln and the College of Marin, Sept. 8, and all the rest Sept. 10.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS open as early as Tuesday for Catholic schools who follow the archdiocesan calendar and as late as Sept. 10 for San Rafael's Three R Schools. (Catholic schools which do not choose to follow the church's calendar are to start when public schools in their respective areas begin.)

In Marin County last school year buses carried students a distance of 1,553,680 miles with no injury accidents, according to school bus officer Ted E. McGuire of the California Highway Patrol.

McGuire said the highway patrol, keenly interested in bus safety, stresses three points:

INSPECTION of vehicles to guard against mechanical defects, careful screening of drivers and training of pupils so they will comply with safety precautions.

The Highway Patrol is charged by the state to test and license bus drivers and inspect all buses from top to bottom.

Drivers must pass a written test of 100 questions with a grade of 94 per cent or better. They must take an oral exam which stresses the driver's ability to get along with children.

In addition, they must pass a driver's test, a physical examination and earn the American Red Cross standard first aid card or equivalent test given by the highway patrol. No one is hired who has been convicted of immoral acts, said the officer.

MANUEL SILVA guides a Mill Valley School District bus over the long and winding Mountain Home run. And so that he can concentrate upon the roadway and the traffic, he insists upon strict discipline among his young passengers. There is no "funny business" on his bus. (Independent-Journal photos)

McGUIRE SAID he plans a training class for school bus officers this year, the second CHP one to be given. Some school districts have their own training classes and one private bus company, Patchett's Bus and Transportation Co. of San Rafael, also has its own classes.

McGuire inspects every bus — about 110 public and 20 private — in Marin twice every 13 months. Buses are checked at the school districts, and the survey covers everything from the horn and defrost system to tires, wheels, brakes and grease accumulation. Undercarriage inspections began in 1967.

When a Marin school bus driver was forced to ditch his bus — although no injuries took place — evidence showed that there had been improper maintenance, McGuire reported. As a result, the school district has gone to leasing buses, he said.

IN JUNE OF this year a testing program was conducted by a University of California at Los Angeles study group as part of a 17-year research program in vehicular safety. Accidents were simulated using real vehicles but dummy school children to see how to make school buses more safe.

The Highway Patrol issues information regularly to school districts state-wide to bring trouble areas to the districts' attention. Corrections are made, if need be, to particular models of vehicles, McGuire said.

In extreme cases a bus is declared unsafe and a "Stop Use" order issued by the patrol.

MOST OF Marin County's school bus drivers are women with the Novato School District drivers all being females.

"They do a better job," said Lee Avilla, Novato director of transportation. "For one reason, I don't hire anybody unless they are married and have a family."

"Secondly," he continued, "they handle so many youngsters that the kids respect them as they would their own mother. Normally, a woman can communicate better with elementary school youngsters than a man. In the high school area, the kids have respect for women where they would argue with a man. It's a proven thing."

ONE PROOF is that Avilla's wife, Ann, is one of the Novato

drivers. She is in her 17th year in the district — one of the county's largest — which has 20 drivers, 17 large coaches and two mini-buses.

The Marin County Schools Office has the largest number of buses — 29. It also has the largest area to cover — the whole county — but buses only special education students.

It has 24 vans and station wagons and five large coaches. The drivers carry 350 pupils, ages 3 to 21, all of whom are picked up at their doors and a number of whom are in wheelchairs.

BUSING IN fiscal year 1968-69 cost the county schools office $183,000 or one-seventh of the total $1,382,191 budget.

Asst. Supt. Stanley H. Friese believes the main trend in school busing is to convert the present multi-systems into one agency such as the county schools office. Legislation was introduced this year to create such a changeover but failed, he said.

Another trend in school busing, in McGuire's view, is that the districts are cutting back on busing due to costs. He cited Tamalpais High School District which has a proposal before the board to charge students for busing and the fact that the San Rafael Board of Education, in budget cuts, dropped 10 of its 20 buses recently.

TAMALPAIS District now runs only one bus. It contracts, according to business director Frank A. Cassou, for other buses either through Greyhound or Herbert R. Wade. Wade, a former Tamalpais School District bus driver, now operates four buses of his own under the Marin City Transportation Co. banner.

There is a trend toward diesel power school buses and away from gasoline power, because operation and maintenance of a diesel engine is less, John A. Thomson, San Rafael City Schools director of maintenance, reported.

NOVATO BUS DRIVER Lena Blaski keeps close check on a lot of things on her bus including the air pressure in the tires. Before going out on her run each morning, she makes this check. She works for a transportation director who believes that women are better bus drivers than men because they are more accustomed to working with children. And children generally show them the same respect they accord their mothers.

The diesel conventional buses cost a little over $9,000. A diesel transit bus — which is easier to handle, has a shorter turning radius and a longer life usually — costs about $21,000, Thomson explained.

SOUTHERN SONOMA County has about 26 buses, the largest single district being Petaluma which has 22 buses, Marvin E. Gharet, California Highway Patrol traffic officer, said.

The Southern Sonoma safety record matches Marin's with no injury accidents during the school year 1968-69, Gharet reported. The area has a preponderance of women drivers with the Petaluma district having 20 including relief drivers.

Something new will be added this year at the Old Adobe School District serving the east side of Petaluma where there will be a mini-coach used as a portable speech therapy classroom.

THE MOTORIZED classroom, which Supt. Dean D. Magowan says looks like a camper, will serve three elementary schools. Fully equipped, it cost $8,892, will handle about six to eight pupils at a time under speech therapist Elaine Harris and will go into service when school starts on Tuesday.

"Stop When Red Lights Flashing" signs are required by new law on the rear of buses, but one thing that remains constant is the bright yellow paint all around.

And another constant is that the buses always seem to go through — like the mail. Asked if snow or rocks or rain held up the Mill Valley Air Force Station's bus last winter, Capt. Robert A. Lewis, acting commander, replied: "We went through all kinds of weather last winter but, fortunately, the days of snow and slippery roads, fell on the weekends."

ONE OF THE smallest bus lines, Lewis said the passenger list on the Mount Tamalpais run usually runs to about six youngsters.

One wonders how a bus driver with 79 lively youngsters can keep the peace. Well he, or she, doesn't always, and sometimes due to four-legged creatures.

One day, said Novato driver Lena Blaski, a long, skinny frog got away from one of the students.

"I had to crawl along past every seat clear to the end of the bus," she said. "It was the slimiest old thing. Finally I got hold of him and put him back in his box."

MAINTENANCE is a key part of the school bus system. The buses must be kept running, and running safely. A San Rafael schools bus is being inspected here for the condition of its brake diaphragms by driver-serviceman Paul Silva, left, and mechanic Lyndell Webb. For safety purposes, the brakes are so designed that, if air pressure is lost, they are automatically applied slowly. The California Highway Patrol is responsible for school bus safety and driver training, and subjects the buses to frequent and rigid inspections.

MECHANIC LYNDELL WEBB, who services the buses of the San Rafael city schools, adjusts a wide-angle mirror that enables the driver to see small children who might otherwise be obscured from his vision inside the cab. Such a mirror is now required of all school buses, according to Webb. "Stop When Red Lights Flashing" signs for the rear of all buses are another legal requirement.

A Bike I.D. Program For Marin

By DON KEOWN

While five such thefts in a 24-hour period in a single city represented an unusual toll of bikes, it is indicative of a chronic problem with all Marin police.

City police throughout the county indicate that Marin's "strayed or stolen" bicycle rate as reflected in their reports exceeds one a day. And there are other bikes "borrowed," abandoned and more quickly recovered that never result in such reports.

WITH THE number of bikes in the county estimated conservatively at between 30,000 and 40,000, sheer numbers alone present police with a formidable problem.

But that problem is compounded by the absence of a really comprehensive bike-licensing and registration program covering the entire county.

Some towns and cities have local ordinances that are enforced with varying degrees of rigidity. Others have no such requirements at all.

A YEAR AGO the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society set out to fill that void by inaugurating its "Marin Bike I.D. Program" project.

Mrs. Robert M. Bramman of Tiburon, a past president recently recognized with an award for 10 years of outstanding service to the Children's Home Society, originated the idea.

She explains: "We were determined that our chapter, now 21 years old, should develop some more meaningful and useful fund-raising method than the usual bridge-luncheon-fashion show circuit. And when several women appeared before the Marin County Board of Supervisors to urge a county-wide bicycle licensing program, a request that could not then be fulfilled for budgetary reasons, we saw that as our opportunity."

THE 40 WOMEN of the Peter Pan Chapter began investigating the need for such a program.

They found that stolen and misplaced bicycles were thorns in the sides of not only police departments, but school personnel, recreation directors and parents as well.

Summer, they learned, is the busiest season for bike thefts. There are lulls in the spring and in the autumn. And then at Christmas time, for a short period, the disappearing bike rate hits its highest peak of the year.

POLICE TOLD them: "Lost and abandoned bicycles stack up monthly and present us with storage problems. And we must devote much time to directing owners of missing bikes to all the various police departments in the county, since there is no one central clearing house."

Said County Schools Supt. Virgil Hollis: "The administrators and staffs of all are schools are continually losing valuable time in dealing with lost bicycles missing from the school grounds."

THE NEED was there, the women of the Peter Pan Chapter decided.

First, they obtained the approval of the board of supervisors, then set up meetings with representatives of the sheriff's department and the county schools office to work out an operating procedure.

The program, the women and their advisers decided, should consist of a licensing and registration good for two years at a fee of $1.

The registration would be handled by the women themselves through teams made available to schools and civic MARINWOOD Fire Prevention Officer Jim Jackson lends a helping hand to Marin Bike I. D. Program and affixes a registration tag to the bicycle of 9-year-old Mark Baldassari, while Mrs. Bruce Black of the Women's Guild of the Church of the Nativity fills out the registration card at the Marinwood Community Center.

MRS. WILLIAM Davies, member of the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society, which sponsors the Marin Bike I.D. Program, searches the master file for the card which will tell the identity of the owner of a registered bike that has been recovered by police. Until the Peter Pan women launched their program, there was no such central clearing house for bike registrations.

"The Braid on My Band Uniform Tarnished"—Mr. H.B.H.

Dear Mr. H.B.H.

This is a common occurrence; one about which we have spoken before. Perhaps we should again. Usually gold braid has a lacquer coating to protect it against tarnish. However, wear and friction remove the lacquer and the metal becomes exposed to acid gases in the air and acid perspiration. Tarnishing takes place.

Drycleaning does not cause the tarnishing. Gold braid can be renewed with preparations sold in every military Post Exchange or ship's store. One popular product is "Braid-Nu" made by Arlenge Laboratories, New York, N. Y. 10007.

groups on request. For each bike registered a detailed information card would be filled out for a master file which would cover the entire county and thus make available to all police departments from one central source on a 24-hour basis the identities of the registered cycles' owners.

EACH BIKE owner who registers his property is supplied with a reflective, numbered sticker, a duplicate of the registration form and an ownership card with printed instructions on how to use the Marin Bike I.D. Program if his bike is lost, or if he finds the bike of another person.

Registrations began in Marinwood in April, 1968. There have also been licensing teams at work in Santa Venetia, at three Kentfield School District schools, at three Larkspur School District schools, at several San Rafael City Schools, and at two bike rodeos conducted by radio station KTIM.

Already the program is producing its rewards.

LT. HARVEY Teague of the Marin County Sheriff's Juvenile Bureau says that "since the Marin Bike I. D. Program went into operation, we have had 25 per cent greater success in returning stolen or lost bicycles to their rightful owners."

He adds: "Our department wholeheartedly endorses this project, and we hope every Marin community will participate."

With the start of a new school year, the Peter Pan Chapter of the Children's Home Society is planning to step up the registration program.

CONVINCED that they should concentrate particularly upon the filing and other bookwork involved, the 40 women of the chapter now plan to share the actual registration work.

So they have begun working with parent-teacher units, parents' clubs and other community-oriented groups, the members of which would take over the actual registration of the bicycles in their respective areas. The Peter Pan Chapter will continue to maintain the files and the answering service.

Mrs. Hubert O. Pessner, president of the 14th District, California Conference of Parents and Teachers, says: "The P-TA has followed this program with great interest. Schools that have participated have found the program valuable in fostering responsibility among the students for their own and others personal possessions. It has also focussed attention upon bicycle safety."

SHE SEES THE bike registration project as an opportunity for parent groups and student councils, working with the Peter Pan women, to raise needed funds for such items as bicycle racks and safety guard uniforms for the schools.

The women of the Peter Pan Chapter, using their experience gained last year, will work with cooperating groups in training registrars.

The members of the Reed Union School District Parent-Teacher Club are already planning a fall registration program on a district-wide basis for Nov. 6 and 7.

The Women's Guild of the Church of the Nativity is working with the Marinwood Park and Recreation Department and Marinwood firemen in that area.

AS ANOTHER means of expanding the program, the Peter Pan Chapter will process registrations by mail this year.

Registration forms are to be printed in newspaper advertisements to appear in the near future. These forms, filled out, and with the $1 registration fee inclosed, can then be mailed to an address to be listed in the advertisement. The license and accompanying papers will be forwarded by return mail.

Mrs. Robert Gustafson of Greenbrae, this year's newly elected president of the Peter Pan Chapter, worked with program founder Mrs. Bramman as organizational chairman in setting up the bike registration system. Mrs. James Reese of Ross and Mrs. Edward Lankenau of Greenbrae were the co-chairmen for the first year of the pilot program. Mrs. Frank Tessin served as P-TA coordinator.

MRS. JAMES Newley of San Rafael will be the Bike I.D. Program chairman for the new school year.

John McInnis, chairman of the Marin County Board of Supervisors, is high in his praise of the women and their project, terming it "a contribution to free enterprise that is saving the money of taxpayers and providing a real service to the county."

But perhaps the biggest boosters for Bike I.D. come from the ranks of those who have had their bicycles stolen, and then have had them returned — all because they took the time and trouble to register them with the Peter Pan Chapter.

IT'S A HAPPY moment for both Mrs. James Newley, the new chairman of the Marin Bike I. D. Program of the Peter Pan Chapter, Children's Home Society, and for 11-year-old Gavin Lange of Marinwood, as she returns a recovered cycle to the young owner. (Independent-Journal photos)

Strumming Classes In The Summer

For many Marin children and teen-agers, their return to classes in the next two weeks will mark the conclusion of a three-months vacation from studies.

But for others the holiday has been a much shorter one.

They are the ones who attended summer school classes. And more and more Marin youngsters are doing so. And often, quite willingly, even enthusiastically.

Take the Sir Francis Drake High School class this past summer in folk guitar, for instance. Twenty-five high school students spent two hours per morning for eight weeks working on their guitars with Roger Lim, who usually teaches history at Drake.

"Some really beautiful things happened," says Lim.

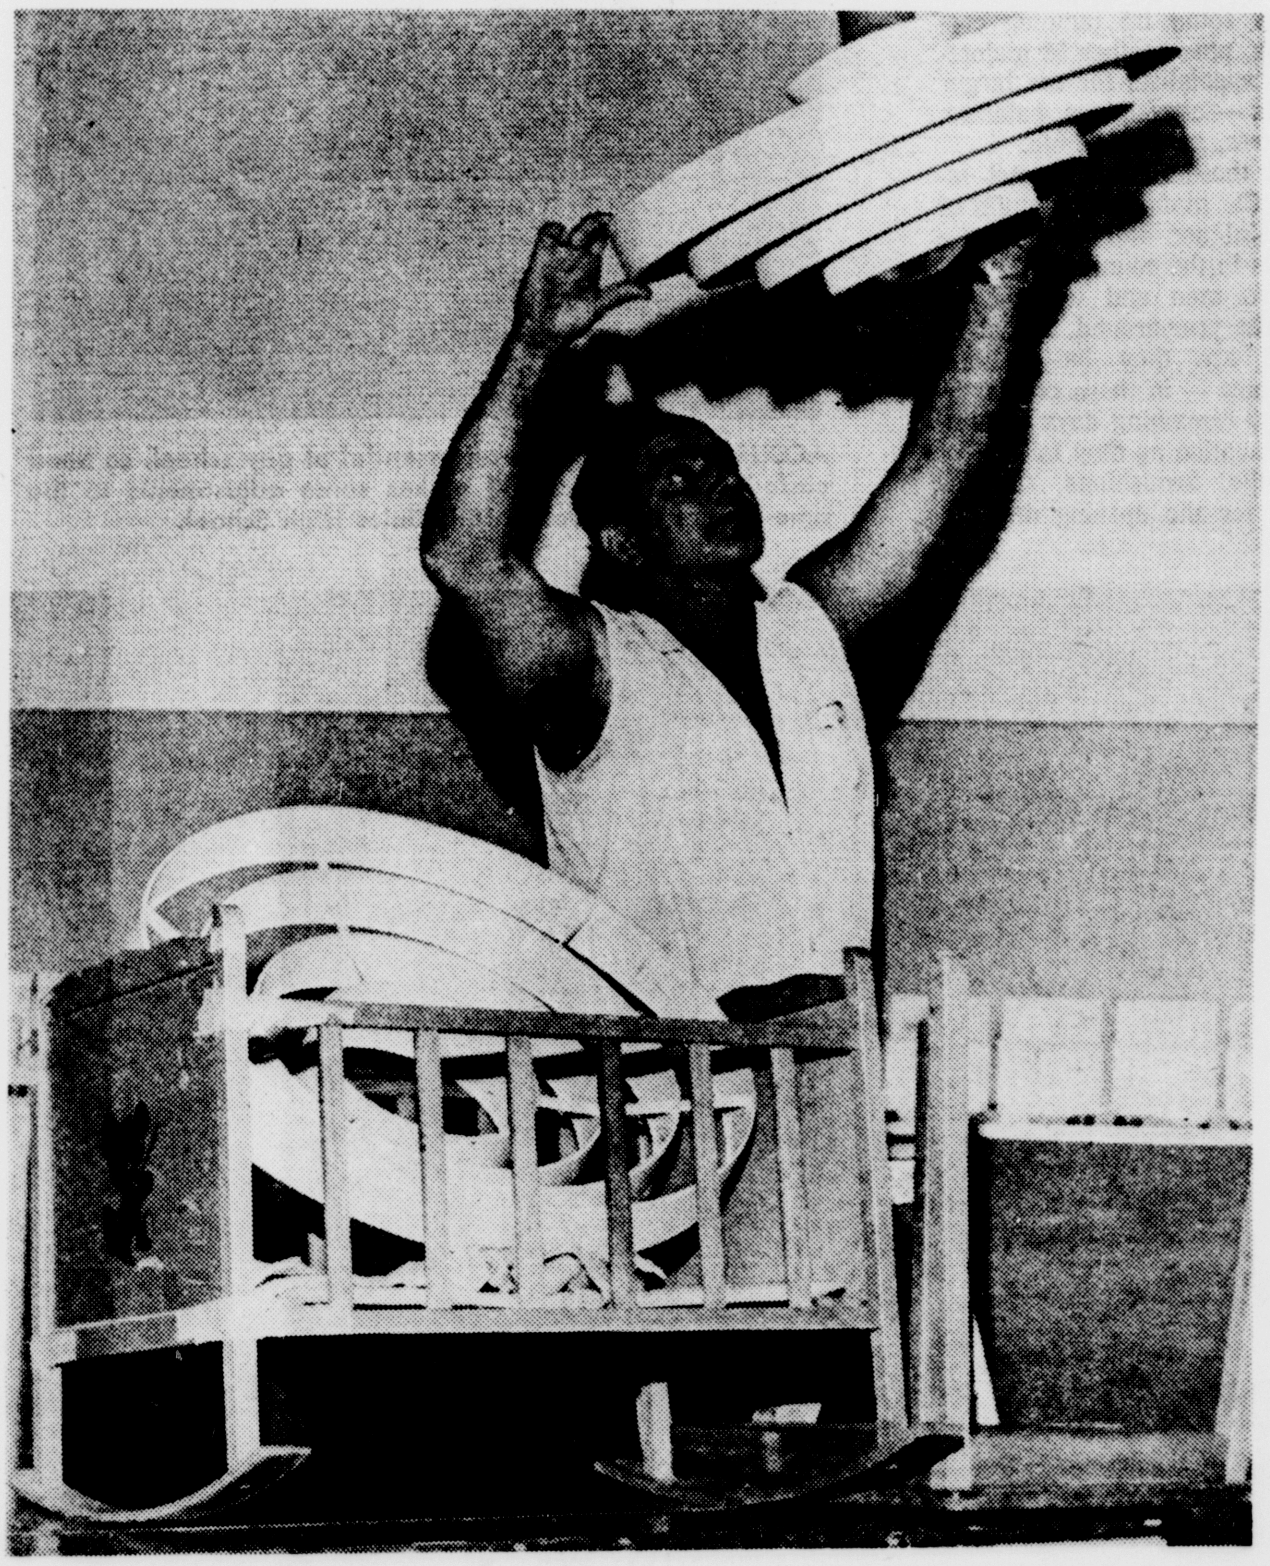
AT ADALINE E. KENT School in Kentfield, Fred Cooper of Fairfax prepares to give the floors a going-over to ready them for the hard use that lies ahead.



A NEW LIGHT fixture goes up in the kindergarten classroom of the Sleepy Hollow Elementary School. Tony Silva of San Anselmo makes the installation.

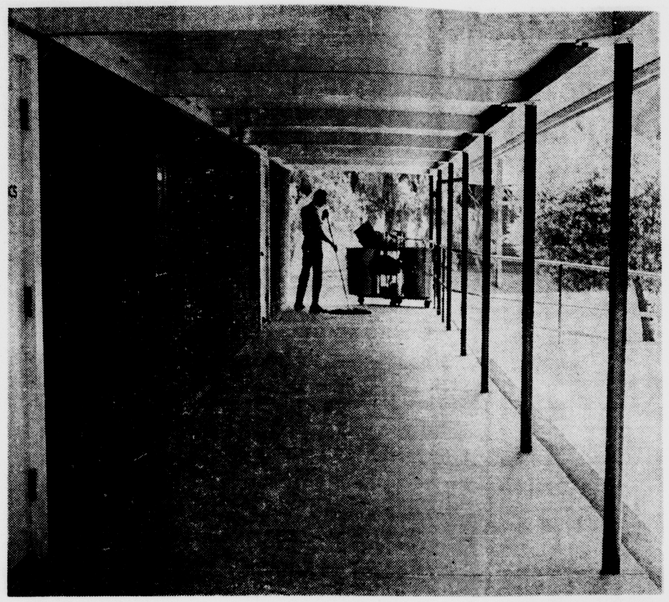
NORMAN STARLING, maintenance crew chief at San Rafael's Coleman School, gives chairs and tables to be used by pupils at that elementary school a good washing to make certain that they are ready for the opening day of the 1969-70 term.



BEN HICKS OF Fairfax has a long corridor before him to be swept as he participates in the final clean-up at Adaline E. Kent School in Kentfield, prior to the opening of the new term.

WILLIAM JUNG OF Corte Madera, the sole custodian at the Greenbrae School, has to be a jack-of-all-trades to fulfill his responsibilities. Here he polishes that essential piece of plumbing at any school building, the drinking fountain. Before he is done, he may even have to do a bit of minor plumbing.

Preparing The Schools

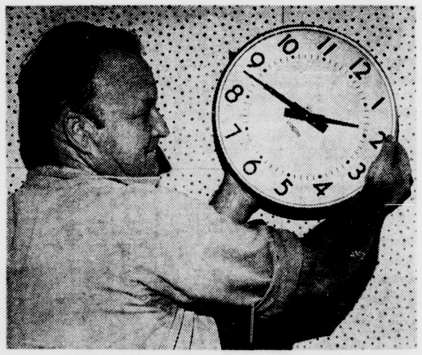
The unsung heroes of the public school system are the maintenance personnel — the men and women responsible for keeping school buildings and equipment in good repair and working order.

Marin County's public schools employ some 125 building custodians, plus another 50 maintenance specialists for the larger schools -- electricians, painters, plumbers, gardeners, etc.

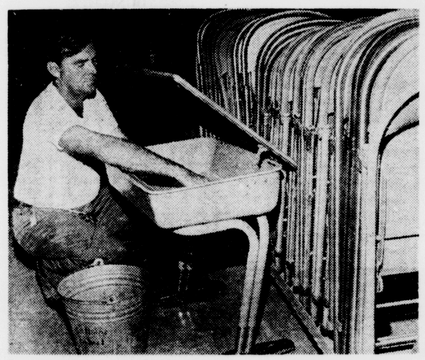
And these figures do not include the maintenance staffs of parochial and other private schools in the county.

These men and women are busy the year-around. But at no period are they busier than right now — in those crucial final few remaining days of summer vacation as they toil to get buildings, furnishings, supplies ready for the opening day.

IT WAS A WARM DAY, but Ellis D. Murphy of San Anselmo, head custodian at Wolfe Grade Grammar School, doffed his shirt and applied a sweat band around his forehead, and proceeded with his hard pre-school work, pushing a utility cart before him.



ACCURATE CLOCKS are an essential at any school, so head custodian J. H. Thrailkill makes some adjustments to the time-keeper at Novato's Hill Junior High School.



DESK WASHING may be a tedious chore. But with another school term about to begin, it is also a necessary one. So Olin Cawthon performs the chore at the Gallinas School.

LOCKERS AT the Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo must be spotlessly clean before Mrs. Gerry Wilkinson, part of the permanent maintenance crew at that school, will be satisfied. Soon these lockers will be crowded with the belongings of the teen-age students beginning a new term.

Scotland Is Great For Fishermen

The Travel Pages

Not every Scotsman is a fisherman, and what a shame!

The great salmon rivers are the Tweed, the Aberdeenshire Dee which flows through the Queen's Balmoral estate, the Spey and the Tay. Here are a number of fine hotels which can arrange fishing for their guests. It is best though, to book months in advance for these famous rivers.

THE REAL delight of Scotland is that for each of these renowned names there are hundreds of rivers, lochs and burns, providing first-class sport and not at all expensive. The trout fishing is as good as the salmon fishing, and even more plentiful.

The season for trout is March 15 to Oct. 6; salmon usually Feb. 11 to Oct. 31, (varied for different rivers).

Then there's fishing for pike, perch, grayling and other freshwater species during the rest of the year. The record Scottish pike weighed almost 48 pounds.

It is simpler to fish in Scotland than in England; there's no license.

IN SOME OF the remote areas of Scotland, and in certain lochs, there is no charge at all for fishing. However, permission is necessary. Always ask to whom the fishing belongs; at your hotel, or an inn, post office or shop.

The Scots are a courteous people with great sympathy and kindness for sportsmen, and you will often make lasting friends.

For salmon fishing try Loch Awe, in Argylllshire, near the center of the beautiful Scottish west coast. Here salmon, sea trout and brown trout may cost you nothing except boat hire.

FOR SUPER brown trout, go to the Orkney Islands, north of the Scottish mainland. The trout average three quarters of a pound, and sport is good from April through August.

The sea trout fishing is exciting farther north in the Shetlands. It takes place in the sea lochs, called "voes," and is at its best in August and September. Much of the fishing is free, with permission from the owners.

In mainland Scotland, the estuary of the Ythan also offers outstanding sport with sea trout. In Aberdeenshire, north of the Royal Dee, some of the fishing is owned by a hotel. Charges are low — only seven shillings, six-pence to 15 shillings — per day according to the stretch of water you choose.

MOST TROUT fishing and salmon fishing is with artificial fly, except in heavy water, or a pleasant way to learn local fishing is to take one of the angling courses organized by the Scottish Council of Physical Recreation (4 Queensferry Street, Edinburgh, 2), with centers on the Tweed, Tay and Spey.

The Scottish Tourist Board's "Scotland for Fishing" gives much useful information on hotels which have fishing waters.

GERMANY'S OLDEST hotel, the Riesen in Miltenberg, may not resemble today's plush modern establishments, but it has a coziness and comfort all its own. Built in the 12th Century, it has provided hospitality to such guests as Barbarossa and Martin Luther. Miltenberg is one of West Germany's most colorful small towns with a medieval personality, and is located on the Main River.

A SWISS VINTAGER is about to dump his load of harvested grapes into a large barrel on a crude wooden cart that will carry the fruit to the wine presses.

The Swiss Salute The Grape

In late September and early October Switzerland "turns on" in the spirit of Mardi Gras.

Wine festivals, among the biggest attractions of the fall season, are held throughout the country. While the event was created to celebrate the climax of cultivation and months of dawn-to-dusk labor, the Swiss have made it into a lavish and merry spectacle.

Vintagers who pick the grapes and press them into wine leave the valleys and come to resort centers to participate in a pageant of song, dancing and parades. At Lugano, Locarno, Neuchatel, Biel, Baden, Morges and other places gay native entertainment abounds along with artistic floral floats.

Since these regional festivals are still actually linked to their original purpose, the genuine folk character of the native performers is the same today as it was hundreds of years ago.

Along with the music, parades, community songfests and colorfully attired dancers, spectators can buy wine by the glass and sample almost every variety of Swiss food served in the booths set up around the main square.

Vintage festivals will take place at Locarno from Sept. 27 to 28; Lugano, Oct. 3 to 5; Neuchatel, Oct. 4 to 5; Biel, Oct. 5, 12 and 19; Baden, Oct. 4, and Morges, Oct. 4 to 5.

Richard Condon— Public Entertainer

MILE HIGH by Richard Condon; Dial Press, 364 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alvah Bessie.

Just as there never was a Manchurian candidate for the U. S. presidency and Richard Condon therefore invented him for an earlier novel, so there was never an Edward Courance West who "invented Prohibition" for the express purpose of manufacturing illegal liquor and all its concommitant evils — gangsterism, corruption, murder and the Mafia, as well as several billions of dollars for his own pocket.

This was a pretty cute idea Condon had — concocting West, his Irish-Catholic ancestry and his descendants. And like his earlier best-seller it will make a thrilling movie if properly cast, directed and exploited.

Condon is what is often called "a hell of a writer," which, in this context, means that he is literate, well-informed (about Prohibition and its history, for example), and he is a professional when it comes to spinning a racy narrative, working up suspense, holding the reader's attention to the end and turning out a slick job of novel-making.

This makes for success as a public entertainer and Condon therefore lives very well in a villa in Switzerland these days.

Reviews Of New Reading

Should he—or we—ask for more than this? There is reason to believe we should, for a man with such obvious gifts should be more than a public entertainer and there is plenty of evidence that he could be much more than that, and still make a fortune for himself.

For the way he goes about it, neither "The Manchurian Candidate" nor "Mile High" is a solid achievement either in understanding or putting down on paper the nature of the human condition, past, present or future. For Condon is glib and slick rather than solid, and deliberately superficial r a t h e r than profound.

There are moments in "Mile High" in which Edward Courance West almost comes to life as a human being — but then Condon slops over and makes it plain that West is so unmitigated a monster that what he does becomes totally unbelievable and a carefully constructed plot running three generations topples over into sheer melodrama. Yet, in West, he had hold of a character who is a sort of cross between the late William Randolph Hearst and the present Kennedy patriarch.

Sometimes Condon doesn't even seem to care whether we believe his story or not, he is so careless. What, for example, could be more convenient than that the black heroine's mother should have worked for West d e c a d e s before and kept a scrapbook about his nefarious activities, which not only included rape and brutal beatings of hired prostitutes but also murder?

And what more contrived than that her daughter, Mayra, should become the bride of West's younger son, Waft, whom the father has refused to see since he was born because his birth "k i l l e d" West's wife, whom he both h a t e d and adored?

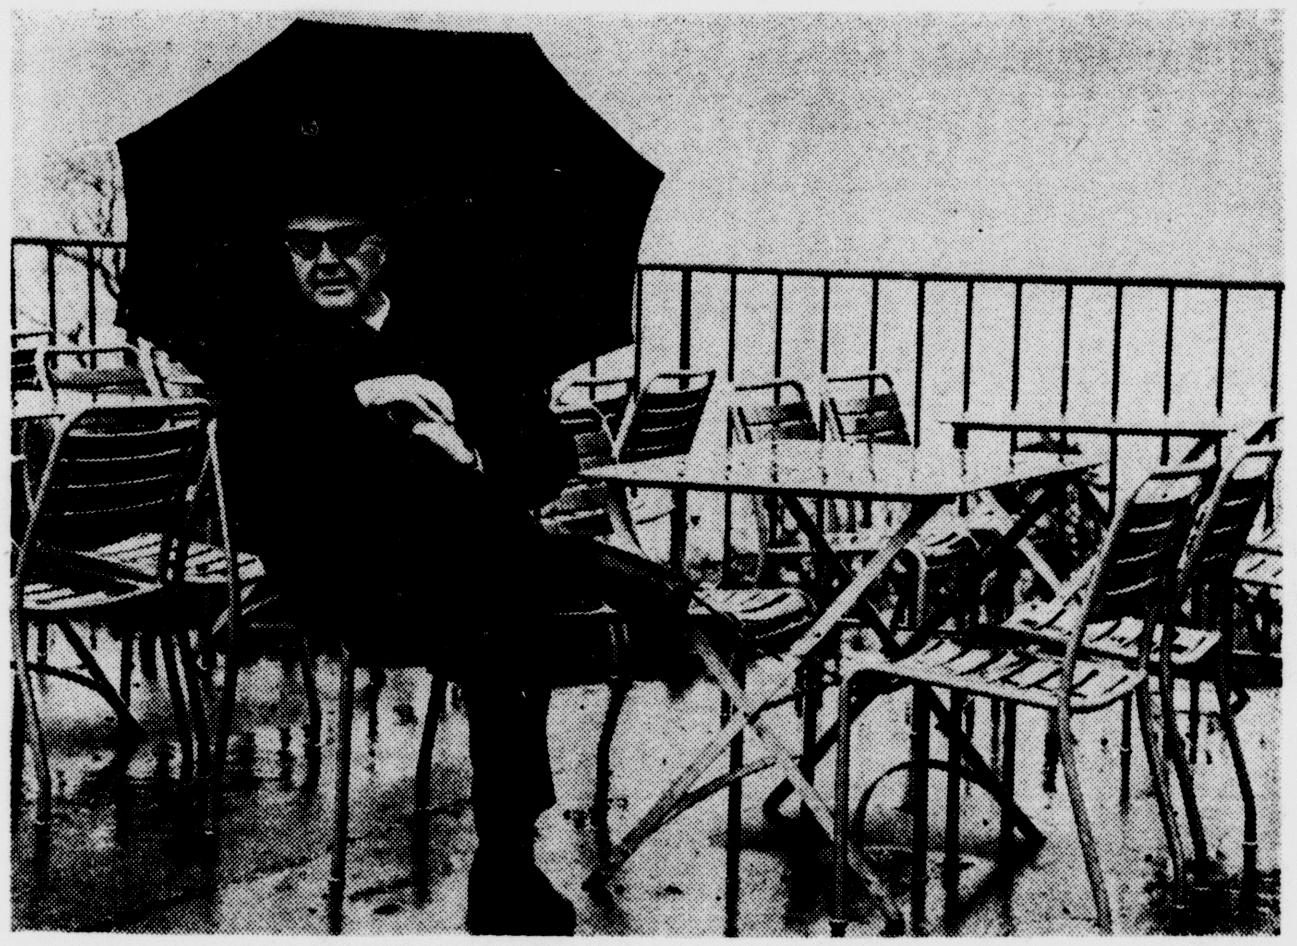
Just as the filmed "Manchurian Candidate" was better than the novel, so will "Mile High" look much better after a good screenwriter and director get to work on it.



RICHARD CONDON, now living in Switzerland, is the author of "Mile High," a novel about the man who "invented" Prohibition. Condon is sitting in the rain for this "gag" photo by Nancy Holmes to demonstrate that personally he is a "wet."

Hesse's First Novel Makes Its American Debut

PETER CAMENZIND by Hermann Hesse; Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 201 pages, $5.50. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

At the time of his death in 1962 Hermann Hesse had witnessed a strong revival of interest in his works, his "biographies of the soul," as he called them, "Der Steppenwolf" and "Siddharta", especially. N o w his first novel, which came out to a great success back in 1904, makes its appearance in America.

Hesse's popularity with today's young people is understandable, if only for his "fin de siecle" air that seems to parallel the dropout mood of the Sixties. There is a definite sense of deja vu about the eccentric costumes and poses, the feverish seeking after "states of extraordinary and u n u s u a l excitement." His heroes are apt to be as alienated as they are high-minded. Although they can respond deeply to nature, they are tortured by the senselessness of their lives.

And so it is with Peter Camenzind, the original, in this lyrical monologue that tells the story of the adolescence and maturing of a Swiss mountain boy who hopes to be a poet.

Hesse's abiding love of nature broods over the whole book and is the key to Peter's largely painful search for meaning in his life, a search that takes him up and down the world, and in the end, back to his humble village, establishing, with unusual poetic authority for a first novel, what was to be one of Hesse's primary c o n c e r n s: man's stubborn love of self as the obstacle to true understanding.

THE LAW REVOLUTION by Melvin Belli; Sherbourne Press, 288 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Revolution is a popular word nowadays, and San Francisco attorney Melvin Belli is not the man to pass up its possibilities.

The "law revolution," according to Belli, is based chiefly on the different approach to the law taken by the courts as they re-interpret the statutes from a sociological v i e w p o i n t. He traces the effects of some of the more noted decisions, and predicts great changes in the practice of the law will stem from the new approach.

Belli's writing is often careless and he is addicted to the running broad statement. But he is successful in producing readable writing about the law, which is no mean accomplishment itself.

A pre-lunar landing, hardcover edition of this fine book was published last year by Viking.

Lewis has done an excellent job of bringing the U. S. space program up to date with a final chapter in this paperback follow-up describing the historic journey to the moon by Apollo 11.

For those who missed the earlier edition, here is a good chance to catch up on what space exploration is all about.

Shop Talk About The Finds In Land Of The Testaments

NEW DIRECTIONS IN BIBLICAL ARCHAEOLOGY edited by David Noel Freedman and Jonas C. Greenfield; Doubleday, 191 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

In March, 1966, the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo and the University of California at Berkeley sponsored a three-day symposium on biblical archaeology, featuring papers presented by l e a d i n g delvers into biblical ruins, and by prominent scholars of ancient writings.

Twelve papers from that symposium, brought up to 1969 and edited by David Noel Freedman, dean of faculty at the seminary, and Jonas C. Greenfield, professor of Semitic languages at Berkeley, are the essence of this book — together with some fascinating illustrations.

A layman can get some enjoyment from chapters of this book but much or it will appeal only to the scholar steeped in the controversies of the origin and interpretation of the Bible and in ancient Mideastern history.

The results of 20 years of delving into the famous Dead Sea Scrolls are reviewed, and findings in Qumran, ancient religious city where some scholars say Jesus studied between childhood and the beginning of the ministry recounted in the New Testament, are recounted, as well as other findings.

The authors make no attempt to present their finds in popular laymen's language — they are talking shop among themselves. Nevertheless, the thunder and lightning of the Old Testament peek through at times, along with glimpses of the ancient life and strife of the Middle East.

Pirates Of Early America— More Foul Than Romantic

THE GOLDEN AGE OF PIRACY by Hugh F. Rankin; Colonial Williamsburg - Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 158 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Despite the romance that attaches to them, the pirates of the 17th and 18th centuries were as foul a lot as modern history records. Nor were their depredations the less revolting because many upright merchants ashore were willing to trade with them for plundered goods.

Hugh F. Rankin in "The Golden Age of Piracy" concentrates principally on those who operated off the Virginia and Carolina coasts in colonial days. But that included some of the most famous (or infamous), from the notorious Edward Teach (Blackbeard) to Captain Kidd.

For those who like their pirates straight, and are interested in the role these robbers of the sea played in the history of nations, "The Golden Age of Piracy" is a rewarding book. And among its characters is to be found the original (or at least the namesake) of the cockswain of the Hispaniola: Israel Hands.

The Church And Rome In Time Of Turmoil And Of Crises

By DON KEOWN

THE BAD POPES by E. R. Chamberlain; Dial, 309 pages, $12.50.

The English historian E. R. Chamberlain undertook a most difficult and delicate task when he chose to recreate those turbulent and colorful years of the Roman Catholic Church that began in the 10th Century and ranged into the 16th Century.

Yet Chamberlain's "The Bad Popes" is a total success, one of the outstanding feats of history-writing of recent years.

Immense research effort has gone into the book. Nevertheless, gaps in the record still exist. Where they do, Chamberlain frankly admits the situation and then offers us his best educated surmisals.

A shadowy, confused era is thus illuminated as it rarely has been before.

Chamberlain focuses his attentions primarily upon seven pontiffs who were by no means among the more pious rulers of the Church.

He begins with John XII, both prince of Rome and pope of the church, a most dissolute monarch with an insatiable craving for gambling and sex, and an active sponsor of ruffian gangs.

There follow Benedict IX of the same House of Theophact and equally immoral, a pope who finally sold the papacy for 1,500 pounds of gold as his crowning indignity; Boniface VIII, ardent practitioner of avarice, simony and nepotism who began what was to become the popular practice of family aggrandizement; Urban VI, brutish, tyrannical, violent; Alexander VI, plotter, father of the yet craftier Cesare and Lucrezia Borgia, subservient to his corrupt son; Leo X of the House of Medici, self-indulgent, extravagant and shortsighted, and finally Clement VII, another Medici, dour, morose, indecisive, greedy, double-dealing, and the man who brought Rome to ultimate disaster in its occupation and sacking by the Spaniards and Germans while Lutheranism spread like wildfire among Europeans disillusioned and disgusted by excesses and failures in Rome.

Not all these men were totally bad. Some had their virtues, and even good intentions. And in among them came other popes, some good, some weak, some nonenities. But it was these seven who were destined to be in power at fateful times when the great Church made its downhill lurches, a trend not halted until after the Reformation.

Generally these men were more politicians than theologists, more interested in material riches and in governing power than in religion or spiritual matters.

They were more representative of their times than of their office, being little better or little worse than the temporal monarchs who were their contemporaries and with whom they often vied — sometimes in war — for supremacy. Indeed, pope of Church and prince of state were sometimes one and the same. And often the pope determined who should occupy the throne in other cities and states, deciding frequently in favor of the members of his own family. There was a continuous struggle for domination of European politics between pope and emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, with sometimes one and sometimes the other on top.

It was a time of grandeur and of decay, of opulence and of squalor, of diplomacy and of conflict, of some accomplishment and greater turmoil. Chamberlain has woven all this into one rich and magnificent tapestry, his final product giving up one of our clearest pictures of a period that has often been ignored or misunderstood.

His narration is brisk and literate, his judgments entirely fair and reasonable. He gives us a picture of a great institution brought to the brink of disaster by the ambitions, moral weaknesses, human frailties, lusts of the men who seized or were handed its reins. It also gives us a picture of a Church whose role in history and whose service to humanity and spiritual meaning were so great that it survived that inept or corrupt leadership to eventually, under more inspirational popes, regain much of its old splendor, status, influence and authority. It is, in short, a marvelous example of the work of an inspired historian.

THE NEWEST paperback reprint by Ballantine from Sierra Club's Exhibit Format Series is "Wild Cascades: Forgotten Parkland," by Harvey Manning, with Philip Hyde photographs such as the one above plus the camera work of Ansel Adams and others. The 160-page book contains 43 color and 72 black-and-white photographs and sells at $3.95.

"POLITICAL History of Latin America" (Funk & Wagnalls, $7.95) by Connecticut College Professor of History Ronald Glassman, which reads a little too much like the standard textbook to attract a popular readership, is nevertheless an important contribution to scholarship on that turbulent region. Glassman concludes his tracing of the hectic political and social development of the area with this finding: "Independence had altered little then, for estate-lords still dominated the land, and though Spain's monopoly had been broken, new foreign interests — rather than indigenous commercial classes — still controlled trade and commercial enterprises. The economic hopes of the landless commercial classes were, thus, shattered." And its alliance with those "foreign powers" (read "United States") has served to keep the semi-feudal class in power, he adds.

Sleuths & Suspense

This story will be entertaining not only for mystery buffs but also for fans of silent movie days.

The book is set in the Hollywood of today but is peopled primarily with aging stars of the 1920s.

The death of Juan Madero leads to a tangled web which involves not only stars who exist only in the imagination of the author but also (briefly mentioned) those who actually did make names in silent movies.

The characters also include a charming young French actress and a nice young man whose career is writing about the movies.

Particularly entrancing is the bar which is the gathering place for the old screen stars and which is the center stage for the book.

The Overlooked Bulbs

In another couple of weeks the new so-called "cape bulbs" should be arriving in Marin County nurseries.

It is, then, none too early to begin planning and preparing the soil for these small beauties.

Too often the Freesia, the Ixia and the Sparaxis are overlooked by Marinites in their enthusiasm for the larger and more familiar bulb flowers. But this should not be. For these three thrive in Marin, and they are unsurpassed in the brilliance and the profusion of their blooms.

IT IS A good idea to plant the cape bulbs in the early fall so that sturdy growth can be accomplished before winter arrives.

Also, if you visit the nursery in mid-September, you should have your pick of the bulbs as to quality. You'll have a wider choice as to colors, too.

The flowers of the Ixia are cup-shaped and come in such unusual color combinations as orange and amber with a brown center, white with carmine markings, and crimson with maroon marks.

These also like sun and good drainage. They will bloom from late April into early June.

THE BLOOMS of the Sparaxis aren't large, but they are so vivid they fairly sparkle in the garden. Their colors — orange, mauve, red, etc. — provide you with an opportunity to achieve some spectacular accents.

All these cape bulbs, along with being ideal border subjects, also provide flowers for cutting. Thus not only do they give you a cheery touch in the garden, but inside, as bouquets, they serve equally well as brighteners.

IT WILL SOON be bulb-planting time in Marin. In a couple of weeks you can begin shopping for the so-called cape bulbs, including the sparaxis shown here. It makes up for the smallness of its blooms with the vividness of its colors. (Photo courtesy of California Association of Nurserymen)

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Begin tapering off on your watering of lilacs and peonies, if temperatures permit, so that they will go dormant early and thus promote better and more abundant flowers next spring.
- Thin rank growth from your grape vines to admit light to the heart of the plant.
- Feed roses this coming week and you'll get more blooms with more vivid colors during the autumn.
- Young trees need more frequent watering than mature specimens. Build a basin around those trees to halt the wasteful run-off of irrigation water.
- This is a good time to check your nursery for early-arriving winter-blooming annuals and perennials. Set them out now and they will be established by winter.
- Continue to clip spent blooms from your hydrangeas.
- Although September is on hand, don't let up in your watering program. Remember that September and October frequently bring us some of our hottest days.
- Don't "over-mow" the lawn in the late summer. Set the blades somewhat higher than ordinary. And don't mow quite so frequently. Otherwise, you'll have brown spots.
- Delphiniums are a perennial worthy of your special consideration for planting at this time of the year.
- Keep lawn raked and free of the leaves that are beginning to be shed by trees.

HANDYMAN'S PAGES

Getting The Most From Hardboard

Because hardboard, especially the tempered kind, is so tough, there is a tendency among non-users to believe that it takes some special kind of skill to handle it.

Actually, it can be cut and worked with ordinary carpenter tools using standard woodworking methods. Which isn't too surprising, since it is made from logs that have been converted to chips, then to wood fibers, bonded together under heat and pressure.

All materials can be cut, drilled and fastened much more easily by observing certain fundamentals. This applies to wood, metal, plastic or anything else, including hardboard.

Here are some tips that will enable you to get the best results when using hardboard in a project:

When cutting straight edges with a cross-cut handsaw, use one with eight to 12 teeth per inch. When using a circular power saw, a cross-cut or combination blade will handle most jobs, but if extensive cutting is to be done, a carbide tip blade is best.

Hardboard can be drilled with both hand and power tools, using standard bits. Work into the finished side of the panel and support the work with a block of wood or other soft material.

For interior nailing, 3d finish nails, galvanized, are preferred. Annular-thread or ring-grove hardboard nails also may be used. Nail the center of the panel first and work toward the edges. Nail at least one-fourth of an inch from the panel edges.

In using a screw or bolt, a hole should be drilled to accommodate the shank of the fastener. For attaching hinges and hardware, use sheet metal screws after pre-drilling holes slightly smaller than the screw diameter.

In fastening hardboard with an adhesive, use a tileboard or panel waterproof type. Adhesive intended only for acoustical tile lacks enough strength to support the hardboard.

When using staples, select those with narrow crowns and divergent points. The staples should be at least a half inch longer than the thickness of the board. Recommended spacing is four to six inches.

Hardboard may be bent to shape.

For large-radius bends, which are to be permanently supported by a frame, fasten one edge to the frame, then bend gradually, fastening to the frame as you go. Never start at the center of the bend. For tight-radius bends, wet or soak the hardboard first.

Panels should never be butted tightly together. They should be brought only to moderate contact. When using hardboards that are patterned so the edges blend into the over-all pattern of the board when brought together, leave a space between the panels the thickness of a matchbook cover.

WHAT YOUR PAINT TELLS ABOUT YOU

The color you paint your house may reveal more about you to your neighbors than you realize.

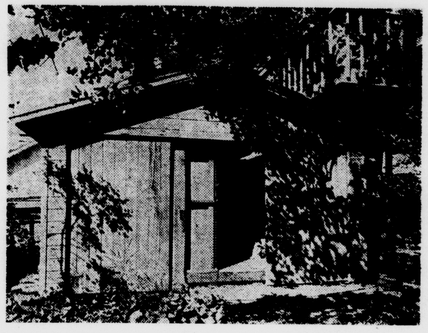
Yellow reflects confidence; green friendliness. Blue among other things connotes tenderness. Black isn't always sombre. As an accent it could mean authority, loyalty and royal qualities. Red not only expresses excitement but reveals human emotions and human love. For sport, good fellowship and masculinity brown is the color. Red orange is strength as well as passion and fury.

White of course is purity.



THE GARAGE pictured above was an eyesore, a bedraggled period piece, unused, taking up valuable space and detracting from the modern house with which it connected and from the property as a whole. But a redwood remodeling job worked an amazing transformation. At right you see that same garage, now complimenting perfectly the home and usable as a guest room, den, garden house or children's wing. Rough-sawn clear all-heart redwood board and batten siding coated with a water repellent has been used to achieve the new-look exterior. Cadences of slim window panes alternate with the redwood. One side of the structure is open entirely to the garden patio.

Glorifying A Garage With Redwood

A dilapidated and unused garage, badly out of place beside a modern house, can be remodeled with redwood into an attractive addition to the main building, giving the owners much needed extra guest and family space.

Refurbished with clear all-heart redwood board and batten siding, the exterior blends perfectly with the contemporary architecture of the house and the surrounding garden.

THE INTERIOR ceiling is covered with laminated A-grade redwood decking streaked with cream-colored sapwood and the walls were paneled with clear all-heart redwood in the same board and batten pattern as the exterior. If the original foundation and framework of the garage are in good condition, no major structural repairs need be made.

Architect Ervin Bell, who also designed the house shown on this page retained and expanded the sliding garage door to allow one wall of the remodeled structure to be completely open during good weather. When the sliding door is closed, narrow glass panels filter light in.

THE REMODELED garage, which contains a bath, is used by the owner variously as a study, garden house, children's wing and guest room.

The redwood garage remodeling job is an example of what can be done without a great financial outlay and is only one of many possible residential projects. Others might include redwood room additions, patios and decks, basement and attic finishing, paneling a room or rooms, or re-siding the house.

Some remodeling projects can be done by a skilled amateur handyman, but most require professional advice and help. Doing it right first saves money and time later.

BECAUSE REDWOOD is available in extra long lengths, there are more design possibilities than with other building materials. Redwood lumber and plywood also come in an excellent selection of grains, grades, patterns, textures and may be purchased factory finished for extra convenience.

For more information on remodeling with redwood, write for "Home Improvement Kit 69," containing illustrated color booklets, technical data, guides to lumber grades and finishes, construction techniques and other information, available for $1 to cover handling and mailing from Service Library, Department MKP, California Redwood Association, 617 Montgomery Street, San Francisco, Calif., 94111.

THE INTERIOR of the new room that was once a garage is charming and functional with its angled ceiling and wall paneling, both of redwood.

How To De-wax A Knotty Pine Wall

Rub with turpentine or naphtha, making certain the room is well ventilated, that there are no open flames and that no one in the room is smoking.

NBC NEWS' "First Tuesday" will take a close look at the sport of parachuting in next week's edition. Viewers will see members of the U. S. Parachute Association in action at an air strip in New Jersey, as they prepare for an international competition. Here, Mac McGraw, about 50 feet above ground, steers his chute in to the target — a disc four inches in diameter. Channels 3 and 4 carry the show at 9 p.m.

Marin Poets' Corner

NO LONGER A CHILD

I am no longer a child—
A child of innocence pure,
A child who's always happy,
A child who's never unsure.

I am no longer a young man—
A man of strength and force,
A man who dreams his sacred dreams,
And then lives in quiet remorse.

For today I am an old man.
A man for whom no one cares.
A man who still can't quite believe
The world with all its flares.

I have seen an old man die,
A newborn babe that didn't cry;
I have seen an old tree bend,
And a new tree whistle in the wind.

I've heard the beach rush to the shore,
And have seen the clean white glistening sand,
And I've seen the beach with soldiers sore,
With the gun in the hand of every man.

I have seen and heard so many things—
The things of beauty, all untold,
The things that bring dreadful dreams,
As the past of my life unfolds.

SAN RAFAEL — JANICE KEYS

THE VISIONARY

Man is the visionary who dreams dreams,
Espouses causes —
Weaves his strands of countless strings
And, alone upon the silent sea,
Dares to cast his net . . .
And leaves behind him in an opalescent wake
A snare of silver fish.

NOVATO — DOROTHY HEFFINGTON

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

JOHN FIELD :"Concerto No. 2 in A Flat Major;" "Seven Nocturnes for Piano Solo" — Rena Kyriakou, piano/Berlin Symphony/Bunte — Candide 31006:

Remembered usually for his invention of the nocturne as a form, John Field's music is seldom heard. Therefore, it is interesting to have this new stereo recording of his Chopinesque piano concerto, which was written around 1808. It sounds like it was composed at least 20 years later and should be heard more frequently on concert programs. Unfortunately, his nocturnes seem like anemic Chopin. Miss Kyriakou is a fine Greek pianist who has many recordings to her credit.

"MUSIC FOR GLASS HARMONICA" —Beethoven: "Romance in G;" Naumann: "Duo for Glass Harmonica and Lute;" "Sonata in C;" Schlett: "Sonata in A Minor;" Reichardt: "Rondeau;" Tomaschek: "Fantasie;" Rollig: "Rondo in A Major — Bruno Hoffman, glass harmonica, with various soloists —Candide 31007:

An earlier Vox album featuring glass harmonicaist Hoffman has long been popular with connoisseurs of a "different" sound in fine music.

The German musician has worked for years to revive the 18th Century art of playing the musical glasses. While none of the seven rarely-heard pieces on the album will probably ever be heard again by the average listener (except through the album), they do serve as fine vehicles for the other-worldly timbre of the musical glasses, and this weird sound is well captured by the engineers.

"GERMAN AND ENGLISH MUSIC OF THE LATE RENAISSANCE FOR BRASS" — The Eastman Brass Quintet — Candide 31004:

Early music for brass has been very well documented on LP over the years.

The most popular composer, or rather composers, are the Gabrielis and there has been much duplication because of this fact.

This album deserves attention because of first, an avoidance of the Gabrielis; second, a well-chosen program of short pieces by Samuel Scheidt, Thomas Weelkes and five other composers; and third, simply thrilling engineering employing the Dolby noise-reduction system. Weelkes' madrigals, as most music of this period, could be performed vocally or instrumentally — it is the latter treatment that spotlights these little pieces as open and good-natured creations.

"THE YOUNG GEORGE SHEARING" — Everest Archive of Folk and Jazz Music — Everest FS 223:

This is a collection of 10 tracks recorded (badly) in the 1940s by Shearing as piano solos. His style had not yet really formed, and the great sound of his quintet is missed, but Shearing fans will like this one anyway.
